TARDIEU SWEPT FROM POWER BY FRENCH VOTERS

Herriot Emerges as Next Premier.

BY EDMOND TAYLOR.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, May 8.—The swing to the left noted in the first ballot of the French elections last Sunday became a landslide in the run off election today—a landslide which swept out Premier Andre Tardieu's majority in the chamber of deputies that has run France since 1928.

Tardieu and the Nationalists generally were swept into the discard. Former Premier Edouard Herriot, mayor of Lyons and chief of the Radical Socialists, won the biggest personal victory of the entire campaign and emerges as the next premier of France.

The Radical Socialists increased their seats in the chamber from 123 to 159, constituting the single biggest political party in the country. That was even beyond their expectations.

Socialist Victory Surprise.

The real story of the election was the triumph of the Socialists, who went from 110 seats to 133, right behind the Radical Socialists. That was a surprise to everybody, including the Socialists, for despite their brilliant showing at the first election, it was not believed they could maintain their gains. And the fact that they did made the elections what they are—not a left gain but a left triumph.

Every important group of the old majority lost heavily and every left group, except the communists, gained.

This will make an extremely unstable majority and the first time the Socialists desert the radical Socialists, Herriot will be overthrown. He will then have to patch things up with Tardieu and make an alliance with the right. This is why the new government is not expected radically to change the French foreign policy or have an important effect on the disarmament conference.

At the same time it should be noted that the second largest group of the new majority is committed to calling a conference for the revision of the Versailles treaty and a complete cancellation of war debts and that at least half of the radical forces adhere to the same principles.

200 Are Newcomers.

Out of 615 members in the new chamber about 200 are newcomers. One startling upset occurred in the defeat of Gaston-Gerard, undersecretary of state for public works and tourism, which strikingly illustrated the collapse of Tardieuism. A crushing defeat for Alsatian autonomy was one of the important features of the vote.

If tonight's returns mean literally what they say—which they do not quite—France, which in the popular imagination has been sitting on a mountain of gold for the last four years and scowling at the world over a gun barrel is really pacifistic, liberal, fiercely republican, and committed to international conciliation and disarmament—preferably with security, but if necessary, without. For the left in French political jargon stands for all those things in addition to a hankering for socialistic legislation and a liberal use of the taxpayers 'gold to lift up the masses.

The forces of the left in the new chamber will total 358 against 244 moderates and nationalists. Without counting on the communists, the left would have a substantial majority.

No Parliamentary Cartel.

Thus the new chamber is much more to the left than the famous cartel chamber of 1924 which wrecked the franc, but that does not mean the parliamentary cartel will be renewed. The feature of the cartel of 1924 was that the Socialists supported the government, but did not enter it. Herriot has already indicated that he will not govern again under such conditions.

The Socialists will decide whether to enter the cabinet next Sunday, and since it is almost a foregone conclusion that they will not accept, Herriot will be forced to bid for the support of the edges of the Tardieu group.

The assassination of President Doumer, which filled the country with indignation and horror, had no influence on today's vote. In fact efforts of the right parties to capitalize on it in electoral propaganda probably lost them considerable support.

D. M. RYERSON KILLS HIMSELF IN LAKE FOREST

Body of Steel Man Found on Beach.

Donald M. Ryerson, chairman of the board of Joseph T. Ryerson & Son, steel concern, shot himself through the heart yesterday morning on the beach adjoining his home at 361 North Mayflower road, Lake Forest. He was 47 years old.

Later in the day a jury convened by Coroner John L. Taylor of Lake county found that Mr. Ryerson ended his life as the result of a nervous breakdown due to overwork. He suffered the breakdown last October, and since then had been traveling in the south with his wife, Mrs. Isabelle McGenniss Ryerson, in an effort to recover his health. They returned to their home about a week ago.

Mrs. Ryerson Finds Body.

Mrs. Ryerson discovered the body, the coroner's jury was told by William B. Clow Jr., 900 North Green bay road, Lake Forest, a friend of the family. She summoned Mr. Clow immediately. Mr. Ryerson was lying on the beach with his overcoat under his head for a pillow. An automatic pistol was lying a few inches from his right hand.

Mr. and Mrs. Ryerson visited at his home Saturday evening, Mr. Clow stated, and Mr. Ryerson seemed in good spirits at the time. He had never spoken of suicide, Mr. Clow said. Fred Baumgardner, the Ryerson chauffeur, testified that he was fixing the furnace about 7 o'clock yesterday morning when Mr. Ryerson passed through the basement, and spoke to him pleasantly. Mrs. Ryerson discovered the body when she went to call her husband to breakfast.

Note Found in Bedroom.

An unsigned note which was found later in Mr. Ryerson's bedroom directed that Mr. Clow and Edward L. Ryerson Jr. be summoned. The latter, who is president of the steel company and chairman of the Illinois Emergency Relief commission directing unemployment relief, is a brother of the dead man.

Donald Ryerson was graduated from Yale university in 1907, and soon afterward entered the family steel company, which was founded in Chicago in 1842 by his grandfather, Joseph T. Ryerson. He became chairman of the board following the death in 1928 of his father, Edward L. Ryerson Sr. The company, which deals in iron and steel parts of all descriptions, is the largest independent steel and iron service corporation in the country. It has plants in ten cities and branch offices throughout the country.

Founder of Four Minute Men.

Mr. Ryerson was the founder during the world war of the Four Minute Men, who spoke in theaters and before other public gatherings in support of Liberty loan and other war drives. The movement, started in Chicago, became national in scope and had 30,000 speakers enrolled at the end of the war.

Mr. Ryerson's organization work was done during his leaves of absence from his duties in the navy. He attended the first officers' training school at Annapolis and was commissioned an ensign. He supervised the construction of a motor cruiser which he gave to the government and later commanded on the Atlantic seaboard.

He was for a time assigned to instruction of submarine chaser crews in Chicago and later saw active service aboard a destroyer in European waters. He held the rank of lieutenant commander in the navy at the end of the war.

Judah Gives Out Statement.

Noble B. Judah, former ambassador to Cuba, issued a statement on behalf of the Ryerson family, as follows:

"Mr. Ryerson suffered a serious nervous breakdown last October as a result of overwork. He had been out of the city with Mrs. Ryerson a large part of the time since in an attempt to recover his health. When they returned to Lake Forest last week it was thought that he was somewhat better. Mr. and Mrs. Ryerson retired last night at their usual hour. Mr. Ryerson apparently in good spirits. This morning it was found that he had left the house and a little later his body was found."

Private funeral services are to be held today. Besides his widow Mr. Ryerson is survived by two children, Joan, 16 years old, and Anthony, 14, who have been attending schools in the east. Another brother, Joseph T. Ryerson, is on his way to Chicago from New Haven, Conn., where he received word of the death.

Massies Sail; Naval Captain and Cop Clash

HONOLULU, T. H., May 8.—(AP)—Lieut. and Mrs. Thomas H. Massie and her mother, Mrs. Granville Fortescue, sailed aboard the S. S. Malolo for San Francisco at noon today after heavy fisted naval officers prevented service of a subpoena upon Mrs. Massie as she boarded the craft through a cargo port. The subpoena had been issued in order to hold Mrs. Massie in Honolulu as a prosecution witness in the second trial of the four remaining members of the Hawaiian gang which is charged with raping her.

Shortly before the Malolo was due to sail, while a huge flower bedecked throng waited at the dock in expectation of seeing the defendants in the recent Joseph Kahahawai murder trial, a gray submarine tender from Pearl Harbor drew up alongside the liner, opposite the pier.

Hurriedly, Massie, his wife, and Mrs. Fortescue stepped aboard the vessel through a cargo port.

Starts Reading Subpoena.

Dewey Mookini, a Honolulu politician was waiting with a subpoena in his hand. He started reading it to Mrs. Massie.

Capt. Ward K. Wortman, Massie's companion at the submarine base, lowered a heavy shoulder and collided with Mookini.

Mrs. Massie darted up the corridor.

"I shall report you to your superior officer," Wortman stormed.

"You assaulted me," Mookini retorted.

Wortman thrust Mookini back against the wall while Mrs. Massie reached her stateroom and slipped inside. Mrs. Fortescue followed her.

Door Slammed in His Face.

Mookini thrust past Wortman, pushed upon the door and sought to read the subpoena again.

The door was slammed in his face. Then Mrs. Fortescue, her eyes blazing, opened the door and came out.

"Will some one go for Mr. Darrow?" she asked.

Wortman and Mookini stood outside the doorway and laced each other up and down, each accusing the other of taking the offensive.

"Don't ever lay your hands on me again," Wortman said.

"You can't give me orders," Mookini shot back.

"Say 'sir' when you speak to me!" thundered Wortman.

"You say 'sir' to me, then," said Mookini. "I am entitled to some respect.

"Yes, you are entitled to some respect," Wortman said sarcastically.

Massie Is Calm.

Massie, who had walked up, meanwhile, was calm. He seemed to have a quieting effect on his superior officer and on Mookini.

Clarence Darrow, counsel for Massie, Mrs. Fortescue, and the two navy enlisted men, Albert O. Jones and E. J. Lord, in the murder trial, did not participate in the fray. He also is sailing on the ship.

A small cluster of people stood at the end of the corridor watching.

Massie walked up to Mookini and put his hand out. Mookini accepted it.

"No hard feelings here," said Massie. "I know what your duty is."

"Sure, the same as yours," Mookini agreed.

Then Wortman extended his hand and he and Mookini made up.

"Now that's the fine way to look at it," Mookini said, while Wortman grinned.

Meanwhile, the subpoena had not been served. Two of Mookini's companions, Arthur Stagbar and Lolo McCallum, members of the detective force, had stood quietly during the clash between Wortman and Mookini.

Child, 4, Rings Doorbell; Routs 2 Burglars in Flat

Frederick Murray Jr., 4 years old, 3512 Pine Grove avenue, went calling yesterday afternoon. The first door at which he rang the bell led to the flat of William Warnecke, in the same building. Fred didn't know it, but two robbers had entered the apartment a little earlier and had tied Warnecke and his 15 year old daughter, Regina, with electric light cord and were ransacking the place. They were frightened at his ringing and fled out a rear door, taking $18 and abandoning further efforts to get jewelry and furs. Warnecke and his daughter were released a little later when Mrs. Warnecke returned from a picture show.

Dudley Malone Sues Daughter of Dr. Murphy

Announcement was made in New York yesterday by Dudley Field Malone that he had filed suit for $20,000 against Mrs. Rene Georges Le Brosi, the former Celeste Murphy of Chicago, youngest of the three daughters of the late Dr. John B. Murphy, noted surgeon. Mrs. Le Brosi was the divorced wife of the late James Gordon Murdock of Indianapolis.

Malone's claim is based on legal services to Mrs. Le Brosi in obtaining her share of the $1,700,000 estate left by the surgeon. The action revealed the marriage last November of Mrs. Murdock to Le Brosi, a Swiss, who is said to have been manager at one time of a Long Island hotel.

Alleged events preceding that marriage were detailed in a statement by Nathan Burkan, a New York lawyer representing Malone, who told of Malone's plans to sue Mrs. Le Brosi.

Attorney Burkan's Statement.

In June, 1931, Burkan said, Mrs. Murdock lailed upon Attorney Malone for legal aid. She told him, Burkan said, that her family in Chicago had been withholding her share of her father's estate, and added, according to the lawyer, that she had been trailed by detectives who tried to prevent her friendship with Le Brosi. A written contract was signed, pledging Malone a retainer and 10 per cent of all property which he might recover, Burkan said.

Up to last January, according to Burkan, Attorney Malone recovered $400,000, entitling him to $40,000 on the 10 per rent basis. Mrs. Murdock, who by that time had become Mrs. Le Brosi, paid $21,000, it is charged, and now refuses to pay the balance on the ground that the contract with Malone was brought about by fraud.

Two Sisters in Chicago.

The Chicago family mentioned by Attorney Burkan consists of Mrs. Le Brosi's two sisters, Mrs. Mildred Hurley, wife of Edward N. Hurley Jr., 539 Stratford place, and Mrs. Cecille Benedict, 5490 South Shore drive, widow of Julius T. Benedict, millionaire, who was killed in an automobile accident in 1929. Mrs. Hurley's husband is the son of the wartime head of the shipping board. Neither Mrs. Hurley nor Mrs. Benedict could be reached last night.

Friends asserted that there had never been any serious dispute among the sisters over the Murphy estate. One friend close to the family admitted, however, that the two Chicago sisters had felt some concern last fall over the intended marriage of Mrs. Murdock to Le Brosi "because they did not know him." Since then, this friend said, the Le Brosis have visited Chicago—as recently as last March—and whatever doubts had existed as to Le Brosi's acceptability had vanished.

Bandit Killed; 3 Wounded in Holdup Battle

Four armed men who attempted to hold up the Clody flower shop at 3900 North Clark street late yesterday afternoon were met with the pistol fire of two florists battling to save their heavy Mother's day receipts.

The bandits shot back. In the exchange of bullets one of the robbers, an ex-convict, was shot and fatally wounded. He died several hours later. A second member of the band, according to witnesses, was also struck, but was able to escape with two of his companions. Edward Clody, 63 years old, and his son, Laurent Clody, 39 years old, the shooting florists, were wounded slightly—the father in a beating by the robbers and Laurent by a bullet that grazed his scalp.

Eight in Store.

In the store when the stickup men entered were the father and son, Mrs. Constance Clody, wife of Laurent; two women employés, a male employé, and two customers.

Two of the robbers stopped at the front door. One walked over to Mrs. Clody and the fourth advanced on Edward Clody, who stood by the cash register, which contained nearly $1,000. Laurent and his designer, Jerry Hudjera, 644 Wrightwood avenue, were in the rear, out of sight, behind a refrigerator.

"This is a stickup," shouted one of the bandits. "Hands up."

Mrs. Clody obeyed. So did the two salesgirls, Miss Josephine Naylor of 3900 North Damen avenue and Miss Laura Weber, 1911 Howe street.

Reaches for Pistol.

Edward Clody, however, reached behind a counter for a pistol. As he came up with it the bandit nearest slugged him with the butt of a pistol. Clody retained his hold on his own weapon and strove to turn it against his assailant. At this point Laurent Clody stepped out firing from his pistol.

The slugging bandit was struck in the neck and the chest. As he reeled toward the door his companions tried to cover his retreat with their fire. The girls and the two customers and 11-year-old Laurent Clody Jr., who had followed the robbers in and joined his mother crouching down among the flowers. Bullets crashed close to the Clodys. Each was spared a fatal wound by inches.

At the door the wounded bandit collapsed. Another staggered as he and the remaining pair got into an automobile at the curb and drove south in Clark street to Waveland avenue and then west. A motorist read the license number and reported it to the police.

A Long Criminal Record.

The seriously wounded robber was taken to the American hospital. Later he was removed to the Bridewell hospital, where his death occurred. Finger prints and records at the bureau of identification showed that he was Arthur McNally, 37 years old, with a criminal record that began in 1914.

He was sent to Pontiac reformatory for manslaughter in that year; paroled in March, 1917, and sent back in October, 1917 on a charge of robbery with a gun. Transferred to Joliet prison, he escaped in July, 1920, was caught and sent back a month later and remained there until paroled in December, 1928. He was discharged from parole last February.

Search for Wounded Man.

Tracing the car license number, the police found it had been hired at a drive yourself station at 4824 Broadway early in the afternoon by two men and returned ten minutes after the shooting by one man. The name given by the renter, R. H. Little, was found to be fictitious. A search was started for the second man believed to have been wounded by the younger Clody.

Laurent Clody was formerly secretary of the Allied Florists' Association of Illinois. Seven years ago he was foreman of the coroner's jury which investigated the death of William McClintock, millionaire orphan for whose murder his godfather, William D. Shepherd, was tried and acquitted.

EX-POLICEMAN OF MELROSE PARK SLAIN IN BRAWL

Albert Casper, 32 years old, a former Melrose Park policeman, was shot four times and killed late last night during a brawl in the basement of his home at 1006 North 23d avenue, Melrose Park. Police said he operated a beer flat there.

The killer escaped, but Police Chief Arthur Leeseberg and Assistant State's Attorney Edwin Markham said early this morning that his arrest was certain. Three witnesses to the slaying were held.

Casper and the gunman engaged in a dispute over some matter unknown as yet to the authorities. The killer whipped out a revolver, fired four times into the ex-policeman's head, and then fled. At the time of the shooting Mrs. Mary Casper, wife of Casper, who had overheard the quarrel, was standing in the street calling for aid.

EX-COMMISSION HEAD DECLARES FOR SHOWDOWN

Feels "Strongly" on Matter, He Says.

Washington, D. C., May 8.—(AP)—Out of the two years of study with the famed Wickersham commission and a subsequent 16 months of personal observation, George W. Wickersham feels "more strongly than ever" that a national referendum on prohibition is needed.

The 73 year old former chairman of President Hoover's commission has dropped the silence that enshrouded him during the work of the commission.

In an interview, he spoke today of his referendum view—expressed during the commission's deliberations—of the prohibition views of its members, their much discussed joint dry law summary and of the work of the commission's entire two year law enforcement study.

Other Work Advancing.

Wickersham feels that the prohibition investigation wrongly overshadowed the great volume of the commission's labors but that this other work now is advancing in due course to fruition in betterment of the nation's handling of criminals.

As to a referendum, he expressed belief a vote on an amendment to the eighteenth amendment through state conventions would do great good in providing a needed crystallization of "the sober, informed, and deliberate opinion of the people."

He made entirely clear, as he did in his portion of the commission's prohibition report, that such a means of sounding out public opinion should be divorced from politics. The state conventions elected solely for this purpose, he said, should be named in an off-presidential year.

Others Hold Same View.

Although he had had no opportunity to poll the recent views of other members of the commission, Wickersham said, he knew that several were of similar opinion concerning the public expression on prohibition.

He was asked concerning discussion of the summary of the commission's prohibition report. Opponents of the dry law complained widely at the time that although a majority of the members in their individual reports contended the dry law had missed its mark and should be changed in some fashion, the conclusion of the entire report said:

"The commission is opposed to repeal of the 18th amendment."

Explains Dry Law Report.

Here is his answer:

"Six of the members felt in varying degrees that prohibition was not a success in its form at that time.

"Four of us felt that it was not being enforced properly, but that sufficient opportunity had not been given to judge it a failure.

"One member [Newton D. Baker] felt that the whole question should be remitted at once to the states.

"All were opposed to return of the saloon.

"The summary represented the best view we could obtain from the conflicting opinions.

"A majority agreed that if the amendment was revised it should be made to read that congress shall have power to regulate or prohibit the manufacture and transportation within the United States."

Points to Other Work.

Wickersham feels now, as he did 16 months ago, that the commission's dry law investigating was far from being the most important or valuable part of its work.

"Out of the cloud that surrounded the commission through its prohibition study," he said, "is coming a realization that it really did an immense amount of work outside of prohibition. Not that there is less interest now in prohibition.

"In my travels over the country I find more and more bodies discussing crime in its relation to social conditions. Letters are coming to me in larger and larger numbers asking about other phases of the commission's study."

Asked which part of the study had become most reflected in the nation's legal proceedings, he named the report on delinquent children, pointing out that part of its conclusions recently had been ordered into effect by the justice department.

ADVICE GIVEN TO STATES

Washington, D. C., May 8.—[Special.]—Henry H. Curran, president of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment, is so sure that national prohibition is about to be repealed that he has begun distribution to the states of information on tested systems of liquor control.

Every member of the senate received from Mr. Curran today a letter inclosing the association's pamphlet on the liquor systems of the world with the offer to send the booklet to any senator's constituents upon request.

The Curran letter to Senator James Hamilton Lewis [Dem., Ill.] explained:

"I can imagine the relief it will be to you to get out from under the unnatural burden of a national compulsory total abstinence system clamped upon you by the people of other states far from your own borders. Here in the state of New York I shall be busy like you, just as one citizen of my own state, in helping our New York legislature to give us a liquor control system which will be in the interest of temperance, law and order and the public peace because it will be in conformity with the preponderant judgment of the citizens of my state.

"The enclosed pamphlet entitled 'What Shall Replace Prohibition?' will aid you with its authentic exposition of liquor control systems now in effect in other countries."

DRYS DENY PLANS FOR MOP-UP HERE; RUMORS PERSIST

Persistent reports that an army of prohibition agents will sweep into Chicago to dry up the wet spots before the two national conventions next month, were denied yesterday by M. L. Harney, local prohibition administrator, and Arthur Hamilton, his deputy.

"The stories are merely stories," said Administrator Harney. "They have gained such circulation, however, it is useless to deny them.

The reports started several weeks ago when a number of local saloon keepers admitted that the word had been passed around to stay closed during the conventions. Moreover, the saloon keepers were advised, they said, that the convention cleanup order originated in Washington.

While dry chiefs here dismissed the reports smilingly, it is known that fifteen special agents, all from southern states, have been sent here. Their specific duties are to buy drinks as evidence for raids. It is said these men were brought here at Harney's own request. Harney declined to discuss any plans for dry action during the conventions.

'AFTER ALL, ONE JAIL IS JUST AS GOOD AS ANOTHER

The telephone at the Lawndale police station rang last night. From the other end of the wire came the voice of First Assistant Warden George Gibson of the county jail.

"There's a man trying to break in the front door of our jail," he said.

"And what are you doing?" asked the desk sergeant.

"We double locked the door," said First Assistant Warden Gibson. "He's disturbing our prisoners."

Lieut. Charles Welling went to the jail. Standing outside, pounding the portal and crying: "I want in," was Claude Stewart, 32 years old, a one-time railroad fireman. To the lieutenant he explained.

"My conscience is pinching,' 'he said. "They want me in Los Angeles for a robbery, passing some bum checks and deserting my wife. Why won't they let me in?"

"You come to our jail," said the lieutenant. "It's just as good for your conscience as this one." He was locked up at the Lawndale station.

FOUND DEAD IN BED.

John McFarlane, 55 years old, 12 South Hoyne avenue, an electrician, was found dead in his bed yesterday, apparently a victim of heart disease.

PLAN TO PAY WAR DEBTS IN SILVER WINNING SUPPORT

Preferred if Inflation Must Come.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., May 8.—[Special.]—Whether an inflation of the currency is to be an inevitable development of the economic depression and, if so, what form it is to take are questions forcing themselves upon the attention of congress with ever increasing insistence. Events of the coming week will have an important bearing upon the issue.

The demand for cheap money voiced by the debtor class is again echoing through the country, emanating largely from the agrarian states of the west as in the decades of hard times culminating in the free silver campaign of 1896. Prices have declined to such an extent that it takes twice as many bushels of grain to pay the debts of the farmer as when he contracted them.

What the farmer wants is enough more money in circulation to raise the price of his products to the level at which he contracted his debts. Then he can pay his debts without loss.

Various Inflation Schemes.

This demand for an increased volume of money has been manifested to some extent in the attempted revival of the free silver issue by Senator Burton K. Wheeler [radical Dem., Mont.] and others to a greater extent in the greenback inflation scheme of the bonus bill, but to a more pronounced degree in the support given the Goldsborough bill directing the federal reserve board to restore the average price level of 1921-'29 by manipulation of the volume of credit and currency. This measure which was passed by the house last week was sponsored by the Democratic leadership of that body, was advocated by the leading farm organizations and was supported by an overwhelming majority of the congressmen of both parties.

The Wheeler move for the free coinage of silver has proved a dud, the bonus bill has been rejected by the house ways and means committee, and the Goldsborough bill has been doomed by President Hoover and the conservative element of the senate with the declaration that it would produce a dangerous degree of inflation.

Milder Proposals Follow.

As a result, other proposals of inflation in milder form are coming to the fore and meeting with approval in unexpected quarters. Many thoughtful business men, for example, have apparently become convinced that we shall not weather the depression without some sort of inflation and that it behooves the responsible element of the community to see to it that the form of inflation adopted shall be controlled and harmless in the long run.

The opinion in such quarters that inflation is inevitable is due to the conviction that it will be several years at least before the federal budget is balanced. Congress is manifesting insuperable opposition to the radical reduction of government expenditures essential to bringing the national outgo anywhere near the national income. At the same time the prostration of business is sufficient evidence that the increased tax rates imposed by congress will fail to yield enough revenue to meet the continuing large volume of expenditures.

It therefore will become necessary for the government to borrow indefinitely to meet the deficit, with the inevitable result of indefinite borrowing and an unbalanced budget—inflation.

Silver War Debt Payments.

Many who believe that some sort of inflation is unavoidable are inclined to favor the resolution introduced in the house by Representative Andrew L. Somers [Dem., N. Y.], chairman of the coinage committee, and in the senate by Senator Carl Hayden [Dem., Ariz.] as the least harmful of all inflation measures so far proposed.

This resolution authorizes the President to accept in payment of the war debts in the next four years silver at the rate of 1⅓ fine ounces for each dollar owed, provided the debtor nation does not melt or debase its silver coins to make the payment. Furthermore, the resolution provides that if the debtor shall restore its silver coinage to a fineness of at least 9/10 silver or shall establish the use of silver for coinage it shall be allowed to pay its war debts at the rate of 1 fine ounce of silver for every dollar owed.

"The silver so received," the resolution provides, "shall be coined into dollars of standard weight and fineness and deposited in the treasury of the United States and silver certificates shall be issued, in the manner now provided by law, against the dollars so coined."

Considered by Senate Committee.

This resolution is to be considered this week by a subcommittee of the senate banking and currency committee, which also will consider another inflation measure, the bill of Senator Key Pittman [Dem., Nev.] providing for the purchase and coinage by the treasury of not to exceed five million ounces of silver a month to be paid for in silver certificates which shall be legal tender for payment of all debts. Senator Pittman has proposed the combination of the two measures.

There is also evidence of an awakening interest at the White House in the general subject of action to manipulate upward the price of silver, for which the silver producing states have been clamoring. Indications are not lacking that Senator William E. Borah [radical Rep., Ida.] in his senate speech last week struck home when he accused the President of failure to proceed in good faith to procure the international silver conference requested by the senate a year ago. Mr. Hoover has now indicated a willingness to give consideration to the silver proposals.

The silver producers attribute the fall of the price of the metal to its present level of under 30 cents an ounce mainly to the demonetization of silver by India and the debasement of silver coinage by Great Britain, France and other nations. The aim of the Hayden-Somers resolution is to offer the war debtors a saving in paying their war debts in silver, sufficiently attractive to cause them to buy silver and remonetize silver, with the result of boosting the price of metal.

Billion Dollars Affected.

In the next four years payments aggregating one billion dollars are due the United States on the war debts. To the extent the debtors gained by paying in silver under the terms of the resolution the United States would lose. But this loss and the inflation entailed in the scheme would be more than offset, it is contended, by the increased purchasing power for American goods on the part of such silver money countries as China, resulting from the increased value of silver.

Authorities calculate that the war debtors would find it profitable to pay the United States in silver until the metal reaches a price of 60 to 70 cents an ounce.

"The primary object of the joint resolution," said Senator Hayden tonight, "is to break the world wide vicious circle of declining prices by enhancing the purchasing power of nearly one-half of the people of the world, who have no more other money than silver. This is to be accomplished by creating a demand for silver during the next four years which will insure an increase in its value.

Would Open Markets.

"The market price of silver is now below 30 cents an ounce. If the price of silver is restored to its pre-war level of about 60 cents an ounce as a result of regular and sustained buying by foreign governments the inevitable result will be the creation of a market for raw materials and manufactured goods which are needed in Mexico, India, China, and other silver using countries.

"It is assumed that any apparent loss which may accrue to the American government because of the acceptance of silver in payments on the foreign debts will be balanced by a gain in revenues due to improved foreign trade. We all live in one world and must generally either suffer or prosper together."

FALL'S TERM ENDED, WITH PROSPECTS HE WILL BE FREE SOON

Santa Fé, N. M., May 8.—[U.P.]—Albert B. Fall, former secretary of the interior and convicted of accepting a bribe, completed his term of a year and a day, less good time, in the New Mexico state penitentiary today, but failed to obtain his release.

Mrs. Fall appealed to Warden Ed Swope for permission to visit Fall, inasmuch as his term had expired, but encountered a refusal. It was indicated that Fall would be freed some time tomorrow.

Warden Swope said he was leaving for Albuquerque. It was indicated that in Albuquerque Swope would get altered commitment papers in Fall's case from Washington and then return here to release Fall in accordance with their provisions. The papers were scheduled to arrive in Albuquerque by air mail from Washington, D. C.

SENATORS TELL HOOVER THEY'LL ENACT TAX BILL

Pledge Economy Measure, Too, to Suit Him.

Washington, D. C., May 8.—[Special.]—At another White House conference tonight between the President and Republican senators, Mr. Hoover was given assurances that an omnibus economy bill and a tax bill acceptable to the administration will be enacted into law within the next six weeks.

The conference tonight was called to revive the economy measure which was emasculated by the house last week. The President summoned the Republican members of the senate appropriations committee in which the remnant of the economy bill passed by the house is pending as a rider to the legislative appropriation bill.

Senate Leaders Attend.

The members of the committee who responded to the call were Senators Wesley L. Jones [Wash.], chairman; L. J. Dickinson [Ia.], Frederick Hale [Me.], James J. Davis [Pa.]; Tasker L. Oddie [Nev.], Porter H. Dale [Vt.] and Frederick Steiwer [Ore.] Also participating in the conference was Secretary of the Treasury Ogden L. Mills.

The President told the senators that the matter of greatest moment to the welfare of the country at this time is assurance of a radical reduction of government expenditures and the balancing of the budget by a conservative tax increase measure. Such action by congress, the President opined, would do more than any other one thing to relieve the business community of uncertainty and apprehension and promote recovery from the depression.

Urges Rejected Measures.

Mr. Hoover strongly urged the restoration to the economy bill of the provisions proposed by the administration but rejected by the house. It particular he pleaded for his plan to reduce the pay roll cost by placing per diem employés on a five day week basis and requiring annual salaried employés to take a 30 days furlough without pay.

The President estimated that this plan would save 82 millions of dollars. Other provisions in the President's original bill would bring the total economies up to somewhat more than 100 millions. In addition the President proposes that about 230 millions be trimmed from the 1933 appropriation bills now in course of passage.

Economy Bill First.

Mr. Hoover also urged that the economy bill be passed before the tax bill is taken up in the senate, his contention being that the amount of savings effected would establish how much additional revenue it is necessary to raise in order to meet the deficit. Then the taxes could be adjusted to bring in the required amount of revenue. No agreement was reached on this point.

"We merely continued tonight the discussion begun at the meeting of senate leaders with the President last night," said Mr. Mills when the conference broke up.

"We were all agreed that nonpartisan coöperation is essential to speedy passage of the tax bill and the economy bill. An effort is being made to bring about the coöperation of both parties in the senate on these measures. The discussion tonight revolved chiefly around the economy bill which the administration desires restored to its original form."

Due for Early Report.

The billion dollar tax bill completed by the finance committee last Friday is scheduled to be reported to the senate early this week.

The sales tax proposal, knocked out of the tax bill in the house by the bipartisan coalition of insurgents, is to be revived in an amendment to be offered in the senate by Senator David I. Walsh [Dem., Mass.]. Senator David A. Reed [Rep., Pa.] agreed not to present his proposed 1 per cent manufacturers' sale tax amendment after Senator Thomas [Rep., Ida.] and other opponents of the manufacturer's sales tax offered to support the so-called treasury compromise tax plan.

Levy 1 or 1½ Per cent.

Senator Walsh's plan looks to a manufacturers' tax of 1 or 1½ per cent. The original manufacturers' sales tax reported to the house was one of 2¾ per cent. Senator Walsh would exempt from its operation food, clothing and some other necessities.

There is no assurance, it is pointed out, that the house will retreat from its opposition to a manufacturers' sales tax. Some individual members of the house, however, privately admitted the manufacturers' sales tax would be preferable to the special and nuisance taxes now included in the bill.

Supporters of the manufacturers' sales tax are hopeful the opposition to many of the special taxes in the bill will finally align a majority of the senate in favor of the Walsh proposal. House leaders who supported the manufacturers' tax, including Representative Rainey of Illinois, Democratic leader of the house, are ready to vote for that tax again should the senate include it in the revenue bill.

Assassination of Doumer Baffles France; Clews Dim

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, May 8.—All trails continued to point toward Moscow in the third day's investigation into the assassination of President Paul Doumer, but for the moment none of them shows signs of going very far.

Outstanding among the clews was one disclosed this evening by the conservative Journal des Debats. According to this newspaper—and this information was partially substantiated by other sources—the police have picked up the trail of a former comrade of the assassin, Paul Gorguloff. He was designated in Gorguloff's diary as a future co-dictator of Russia, and authorities are on the point of asking for his extradition from a central European capital where he has taken refuge.

This suspect is said to have left Paris suddenly the day before the assassination. According to the Journal des Debats, before this man left Russia he handled grain requisitions for the soviets.

Gorguloff's wife reached Paris this afternoon from Monaco and was released temporarily after a grilling. Nothing she said threw any direct light on the motive for the assassination or on Gorguloff's political connections, but her statement that he had never shown signs of being mentally unbalanced is considered of importance.

She further revealed that Gorguloff has been living almost entirely off her dowry, originally about $1,800, and that this money is now gone.

The newspaper Le Temps tonight in an unusually violent editorial against the bolsheviks hints broadly at their responsibility in the murder of Doumer, saying that "attempts to assassinate chiefs of the state and ministers and diplomats are becoming ever more frequent under circumstances which call for serious thought. Who profits by these crimes, if not Moscow, whose influence can only prevail through disorder and anarchy?"

While the investigation of the assassination is proceeding, final preparations were settled this morning for the election of a new president at Versailles on Tuesday and a national funeral for President Doumer on Thursday.

Albert Le Brun, president of the senate, officially became a candidate to succeed the slain president. Paul Painieve, former premier, was busy tonight consulting political advisers, but has not yet announced his candidacy.

Soviets to File Protest.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

WARSAW, Poland, May 8.—The soviet legation today announced it is filing a protest against the Paris statement that the soviet minister to Poland, Antonov Ovseenko, inspired the assassination of President Paul Doumer by Paul Gorguloff. Contrary to those statements Russian émigré leaders here issued a statement that they were warned by the Prague central Russian committee that Gorguloff was a suspicious character and a soviet agent.

Hollywood, Cal., May 8.—(AP)—Sally Eilers, film actress, wife of Hoot Gibson, and Mrs. Edward Cline, wife of the director, were injured as an automobile in which the four rode crashed into a telephone pole here today. Gibson and Cline were not injured. Cline was driving. He said the accident resulted from his attempt to avoid collision with another car.

Shopping for Machine Gun Brings Arrest of 3

Learning that three Chicagoans had made a tour of Hammond gunshops Saturday trying to buy a machine gun, police went to the apartment of John Defore, 23 years old, an ex-convict, at 6343 Stony Island avenue, yesterday and arrested him and two companions. The other prisoners, arrested by Sergt. James McCarthy and his squad, were Edward Diesner, 24 years old, 2349 Drexel avenue, and Harry Montag, 22 years old, 9839 Avenue L.

Coast Auto Driver Dies of Injuries After Crash

Oakland, Cal., May 8.—(AP)—Jimmy Sharp, Los Angeles race driver, died tonight from injuries suffered in the 100 mile motor car race on the Navy day program at the Oakland speedway today. The race was won by Ernie Triplett of Belvedere, Cal., 1931 Pacific coast champion. His time was 1:07:25.1. Sharp hit the top rail on his 57th lap and driver and car were hurled 30 feet. He suffered a fractured skull, broken ribs and internal injuries.

ORDER INQUIRY INTO DEATH OF HOSPITAL AID

An investigation was ordered yesterday by the coroner's office into the death of Carl Miller, 50 years old, said to be an unlicensed physician, employed in the Dr. Blaine L. Ramsay hospital at 35 South Hoyne avenue. According to Dr. Ramsay, owner of the hospital, Miller had suffered recently from indigestion, but died of heart disease.

Dr. Ramsay said he purchased the hospital, which was formerly called the West End hospital, from Dr. Benjamin Breakstone. He employed Miller to do clerical work upon the recommendation of the Rev. Frederick Lloyd, 44 East Schiller street, archbishop of the American Catholic church, Dr. Ramsay said.

Miller inherited an estate a number of years ago, Dr. Ramsay said, and spent several years traveling around the world. The stock market crash swept away his money.

300,000 AUTOS TAKE TO ROADS OF CHICAGOLAND

BY HAL FOUST.

In approximately 300,000 automobiles nearly a million residents of Chicagoland were rolling over the pavements of the metropolitan area yesterday. The mild temperature and sunshine brought out the heaviest traffic since last fall.

With one exception—on the Dunes highway in Indiana—there were few delays from congestion. This was due in part to the recent widening of Chicago's radial routes following the years of editorial campaigning by THE TRIBUNE. It was also due to the fact that the homecoming of the motorists was well distributed from 5 to 10 p. m.

Jam on Dunes Highway.

On the Dunes highway there was a jam as 30,000 Chicago automobiles returned from visiting the miles of blooming orchards in the fruit belt of southern Michigan. Signboards warned drivers that the new forty foot relief road was closed for repairs. A few thousand cars ignored the signs and their automobiles were splashed with oil where Indiana is rebuilding detours around railroad grade separation projects.

Most of the dunes traffic, however, stayed on the narrow and twisting old road. Lieut. Walter J. Wilson of the Indiana highway police tried earlier in the day to keep all cars moving at least forty miles an hour, but by 6 o'clock his force was busy in an effort to keep the automobile out of second gear.

Motorists Turn to South.

The dunes relief road, with its rebuilt detours, is expected to be open to traffic early this week, and on May 25 the new Indiana 49, with its grade separation at the entrance to the Dunes park, is to open, relieving this holiday bottle neck.

A large portion of the city dwellers enjoying an early summer day in the country mapped their routes southward.

ASKS DEATH FOR 3 OF 12 IN PEORIA KIDNAPING TRIAL

Expect Guilty Pleas by Several of Group.

BY CHESLY MANLY.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Peoria, Ill., May 8.—[Special.]—Several pleas of guilty may be entered and the state's case thereby strengthened when the ten men and two women charged with kidnaping Dr. James W. Parker for ransom go on trial in Judge Henry J. Ingram's court tomorrow, State's Attorney Henry Pratt said today.

JAMES W. BETSON.

Some of the nine defendants who made confessions after their arrest have sought to bargain with the prosecutor, seeking the promise of recommendations for leniency in exchange for aiding the state's case.

But Mr. Pratt said he would not deal with them and that he had all the evidence he needed against the three major defendants, James W. Betson, ex-detective, Ku Klux Klan leader and "reform" politician, arrested in Len Small's headquarters; Joseph H. Pursifull, lawyer and politician, and Claude [Red] Evans.

"I can only recommend to the defendants who are dickering for pleas of guilty that they throw themselves upon the mercy of the court," said the prosecutor. "They might well do this since they have confessed."

May Ask Death Penalty.

It is understood that the death penalty will be sought for Betson, Pursifull and Evans, but Mr. Pratt has stated only that he will tell the jurors it is for them to decide whether the death penalty shall be imposed.

Since the crime of kidnaping for ransom entails the alternatives of death or imprisonment from five years to life, each side has twenty peremptory challenges for each of the twelve defendants. Much time may be required for that reason to select a jury unless some agreement between defense and prosecution on the matter of challenges is effected.

Significance is attached to the Parker kidnaping case in law enforcement circles because it is one of the few among a long series in the middle west in which the victim and his family gave unquestioned assistance to the authorities. In other cases the families have pretended to be desirous of aiding the authorities, but no information of consequence was obtained from them. The law enforcement authorities point out that unless they are given descriptions and other available clews and the victims are willing to make identifications, there is no hope of suppressing this type of crime.

Family Aids in Hunt.

Dr. Parker, well known physician and president of the Illinois Securities corporation, Chicago, was kidnaped while entering his garage on March 14. His wife, Dr. Donna Parker, and other members of the family immediately conferred with representatives of the Chicago Secret Six and offered full coöperation.

These operatives worked day and night until they trapped Betson and Pursifull negotiating with the Parker family for ransom while claiming to be intermediaries for the kidnapers. They arrested the two and a cousin of Betson, who was released for lack of evidence. The next day, April 1, Dr. Parker was released without payment of ransom, presumably because word had gone to the kidnapers through Betson's cousin of the two arrests.

Remarkable descriptions of the farmhouse and some of his captors given by Dr. Parker led to the raid on a place, near Banner Ferry, in the Spring Lake bottoms, in which the other ten were arrested. Besides Evans, these include Raymond Stoops, 37 year old farmer; his wife, Bessie, and their 17 year old son, Dean; Orlo Stoops, brother of Raymond; Edward Woodford, Dwight Bartlett, Homer Massey, Cecil Menninger and his wife, Nellie.

THREE LITTLE GIRLS SPOIL TRAP SET FOR EXTORTIONIST GANG

Taylorville, Ill., May 8.—(AP)—Three little girls, hunting Sunday amusement, today spoiled a carefully planned police trap for the extortionists who have been terrorizing wealthy residents of this vicinity.

Highway police, under chief Walter Moody, were secreted about a spot on route 48 near Stonington, Ill., where the package, purportedly containing $5,000, had been left as commanded. The children, wandering along the road, picked it up and unwrapped it, exposing the blank paper it contained.

While the police remained hidden, powerless to interfere, Moody said, a car carrying several men slowed down as it neared the spot, then, as its passengers saw the children tearing open the dummy, sped away. With no further evidence to go on, the policemen did not pursue it.

The directions for leaving the package had been sent to William Vanderveer, 59-year-old financier of Taylorville, one of a dozen or more in this area who have received such demands. Vanderveer and others had denied receipt of the threats.

GECHT TRIAL TODAY

The trial of four men, including a former assistant state's attorney, charged with kidnaping Dr. Max Gecht for ransom, is scheduled to start this morning before Judge Philip Sullivan. Assistant state's Attorneys C. Wayland Brooks and Ross Lee Laird, in charge of the prosecution, announced yesterday that they are ready to proceed with the first prosecution since hoodlums made a business of kidnaping.

Five men are named in the indictment, but one of the defendant's escaped from the county jail. Those to be tried are Attorney Ward C. Swalwell, former prosecutor; John Pingera, William Thomas and Edward Finnen. Albert Russell, alias Montague, is the missing defendant.

The prosecutors said the death penalty will be asked.

Mrs. Georgia Gecht, blond wife of the kidnaping victim, and who was herself a temporary victim of the gang, is to be the prosecution's star witness. Mrs. Gecht will describe to the jury how she and her husband were kidnaped at 95th and State streets on Dec. 10, 1931. She will tell of the ransom demands which started at $25,000 and ultimately were scaled down to $5,000.

"AMERICANS BUY BRITISH BABIES," LONDON IS TOLD

LONDON, May 8.—[U. P.]—Certain Americans are "buying British babies like cloth over the counter," the Sunday Express said today.

"The reason is that since the war the United States is eager to have British blood to improve her stock," the newspaper said, quoting the price for babies at from $175 to $350 each.

The newspaper gave few details, but said wealthy Americans were making the purchases, insisting that the babies come from good families.

"One man offered $3,500 for a really blue blooded baby," the story said.

PERUVIANS CHEER AS SUBMARINES CURB RED REVOLT

Four Shots Force Rebels to Give Up Cruisers.

LIMA, Peru, May 8.—(AP)—Sailor communists engaged in a spectacular revolt after they had seized the only two cruisers in the Peruvian navy today. Four shots from a submarine forced them to pull down the red flag and run up the white.

The whole rebellion occurred in the port of Callao, near Lima, and the residents of that town gathered at the docks to watch the battle, which also included a little bombing from the air and much maneuvering of naval craft.

For a while, however, the situation appeared to be critical and a state of siege was declared under which the army and the rest of the navy were called into action against the rebels.

Reds Seize Cruisers.

The communistic group, reportedly led by a naval corporal named Pozo, seized the cruisers Almirante Grau and Coronel Bolognesi during the night and imprisoned the ships' officers. A loyal sailor named Casopia leaped from the deck of the Bolognesi, swam to a submarine, and warned the loyal forces.

The rebels were hemmed in the Callao harbor by the four submarines and the remaining destroyer—the rest of the navy—and both sides waited for daylight.

Loyal troops tried to board the Bolognesi from a launch early in the day, but encountered rifle fire, which wounded a civilian on a dock nearby.

Thousands filled the waterfront streets, piers, and docks at Callao and watched airplanes flying over the rebel warships dropping messages urging them to surrender. This failed. Then the planes dropped bombs nearby, to the accompaniment of loud hurrahs for President Luis M. Sanches Cerro from the spectators.

Subs Begin Fan Movement.

It then became apparent that there was no more revolutionary activity aboard the Grau, and that the rebellious element in its crew had joined the crew of the Bolognesi, which was still holding out.

The four submarines started a fan-like encircling movement. The Bolognesi ran up the red flag and fired twice at the nearest submersible, the R-3.

The submarine responded with its small arms, firing two projectiles into the air, and then lowering sights and letting go twice point blank at the Bolognesi. One shell hit the bow and burst a petroleum tank.

That was enough. The rebels ran up a white flag and soldiers boarded their craft. All the sailors who participated in the disturbance, presumably numbering a few score, were taken to San Lorenzo isle prison.

As the revolt ended the spectators went wild with enthusiasm, shouting ceaseless hurrahs for the government.

GERMANY SERVES NOTICE SHE CAN NO LONGER PAY

Reparations Must End, Bruening Insists.

BERLIN, May 8.—(AP)—Chancellor Heinrich Bruening emphatically served notice today that Germany "cannot pay reparations," and predicted the European financial conference at Lausanne a month hence would lead the way either to world recovery or world collapse.

HEINRICH BRUENING.

Addressing German provincial correspondents on the government's foreign policy, the chancellor criticized the statesmen of the world for "lacking courage" and warned that "the peoples of the world won't wait any longer.

"The Lausanne conference," the head of the German cabinet declared, "will either be the road sign pointing the way to a new life or a milestone leading to collapse.

Conference to Determine Fate.

"There must be an end at last to our sacrifices. The world must realize we simply cannot pay reparations.

"The Lausanne results will determine what fate is in store for Germany and the whole world—whether the world will continue to sink into misery or finally land on solid ground on which alone an epoch of reconstruction can be started.

"The eyes of all good willed men are on Lausanne in a spirit of hope and yearning, impatience and demand."

He said the world statesmen lacked courage to tell their peoples the facts as they are and warned that their aid may be too late if delayed.

"Can Wait No Longer."

"Don't they realize that the demonlike spirits of negation and destruction are gaining ground?" he asked. "We can not wait longer because the peoples of the world won't wait longer. We need not a multiplicity of conferences but of deeds."

The chancellor then took up his own attitude in dealing with the representatives of foreign powers.

"I realize clearly that I can obtain the maximum for Germany only if at the same time I can prove that Germany's aims coincide with the enlighthened self-interest of the world," he said. "The tragedy of the Versailles treaty lies in the fact that some nations thought they could secure for themselves all good fortune while all misfortune was to be left to the defeated.

"This false and unnatural conception of peace has been proven completely wrong by post-war events. Unless there can be a change, the world will ever be pushed deeper into the horrible misery known as the economic crisis and unemployment."

Demand for Equality.

Dr. Bruening held that mutual confidence could not be established so long as there was inequality between the victors and vanquished in the world war.

"All Germany rightly rises up," he said, "against the injustice of our being prevented the exercise of what every nation claims as its highest and most natural right, that of determining measures for the security of our homes.

"Germany desires no special privileges in armaments. She simply demands equality."

The chancellor referred to Germany's neighbors as bristling with armaments.

He mentioned as a hopeful sign the disappearance of a spirit of hatred toward Germany, which he said Germans encountered for years after the conclusion of the war.

POLES HONOR MEMORY OF GEORGE WASHINGTON

Mayor Speaks

Chicago citizens of Polish descent yesterday observed the bicentennial of George Washington and the 141st anniversary of the adoption of the Polish constitution of 1791 in a demonstration at the foot of the Kosciuszko monument in Humboldt park. The celebration was sponsored by the Polish National alliance and other Polish fraternal organizations.

Addresses were delivered by Mayor Cermak and Maj. Gen. Frank Parker, commander of the 6th corps army area. County Judge Jarecki acted as master of ceremonies. T. Buynowski, Polish consul in Chicago, presented a flag in behalf of his government to the Boy Scout troop recently organized by the Polish National alliance. A parade preceded the demonstration.

DANDELION WINE DEVOTEES HAVE A PICKING BEE

Chicagoans who favor that old domestic brew, dandelion wine, were busy on their lawns yesterday. The warm days and rains of the last week brought out a fine crop of the golden blossoms.

In the fear that the enthusiasm of the dandelion pickers might spread into other fields, President Emmett Whealan of the forest preserve board repeated his warning that any one found plucking wild flowers in the preserves will be arrested.

The thermometer reached a maximum of 73 degrees at 3 and 4 p. m. The forecast for today is: "Somewhat unsettled, with possible showers."

CLINGS FOR HOUR TO HIS CAPSIZED SAILBOAT; SAVED

After clinging for more than an hour to a capsized sailboat a mile out in the lake yesterday afternoon, Robert Phelps, 19 years old, 275 Prospect avenue, Highland Park, was rescued by two men in a motor boat.

Phelps was cruising off Deere Park, south of Ravinia, when a sudden squall overturned his craft. Persons on shore who had seen his plight notified the Highland Park police and the coast guard station at Wilmette. Help was sent from both places.

Before it arrived, however, Ollie Mullenbach, 2543 South Deere Park drive, and James E. Fusik, 2767 South Deere Park drive, Ravinia, entered a motor boat and a few minutes later dragged Phelps into it.

Your friends will envy these DANERSK tables—yet this week you may have them at $14.50

WHEN we first decided to slash the prices of these superb Danersk Coffee Tables we marked them down to a figure that covered costs plus a small profit—a very microscopic profit, indeed—but still, a profit.

Then we had a brighter idea: Why not, we thought, forget all about costs and profits and price them so low that loads of people who don't know about Danersk Furniture will swarm in to buy them?

Then, when they've lived with these lovely tables and have heard the "Oohs" and "Ahs" of their admiring friends—when they have, in short, learned how much more flattering to their owners Danersk pieces really are, they'll all rush back and buy other Danersk pieces—especially now that they are all priced at such irresistible levels.

So, forgetting costs and profits, we marked each of these incomparable tables down to $14.50. "There—that ought to fetch 'em!" we exclaimed, and we stood somewhat aghast at our own reckless daring. But come and see them now, for this offer is good only during our "concentration sale" which closes Saturday.

BAR PROMISES IMPARTIAL QUIZ ON RECEIVERS

Latham Says Committee Seeks the Facts.

Carl R. Latham, newly appointed chairman of the Chicago Bar association's committee on receiverships and foreclosures, declared yesterday that the committee's investigation of court appointments of receivers and attorneys, and of the fees paid to them and to masters in chancery is being undertaken without any pre-judgment on the matter. The inquiry is not aimed at individual judges, political groups, or certain lawyers or cliques of lawyers, he said.

The bar association hopes to make a thorough investigation of charges which so far have dealt mostly with favoritism, and will seek all manner of abuses, said Mr. Latham, who is a past president of the association. If the courts deserve to be vindicated there will be no hesitation on his part in doing so, he said, and the same will apply if criticism or condemnation is proper.

Seek Only the Facts.

"We want to develop the facts and bring the inquiry to a conclusion, no matter what the result is," Mr. Latham asserted. "We cannot make public our findings as we go along but we will make a report when we finish and this report probably will be made public."

The inquiry was precipitated during the heat of the primary campaign when State's Attorney Swanson asked the bar to investigate the receiver appointments of Circuit Judge Michael Feinberg, who was Swanson's opponent for the Republican nomination for state's attorney, and also the appointments of Judge Stanley Klarkowski, who is of the same political faction as Judge Feinberg.

Louis E. Hart was chairman of the bar committee on receiverships. Partisans of Judge Feinberg filed a petition with the judge asking a grand jury investigation of expected violence in the primary. Judge Feinberg promptly granted the petition, impaneled a special grand jury and appointed Attorney Hart as special state's attorney. He directed Hart and the jurors to investigate Swanson's charges against him and Judge Klarkowski and to investigate the appointments of all other judges as well.

Judges Veto Feinberg Jury.

The eighteen other judges of the Circuit court voted to take jurisdiction away from Feinberg in this investigation and to vest it in Chief Justice Harry M. Fisher of the Criminal court. Fisher impaneled a grand jury and offered an appointment as special state's attorney to Floyd Thompson, former justice of the Illinois Supreme court. Thompson, acting for the Bar association, asked the Supreme court to rule that the Feinberg jury and special prosecutor were illegal. An answer to this request is still being awaited.

Meanwhile, Judge Feinberg held that Clerk George Seif of the Criminal court was in contempt of court for refusing to furnish him with a deputy clerk so he could hold a session of the Criminal court. That citation was continued until today when Seif is directed to appear before Judge Feinberg. He has previously refused to do so and yesterday he said he would not change his policy.

Attorney Hart said that action on the contempt matter would probably be continued again because the Supreme court has not decided on the legality of the Feinberg actions. The Feinberg grand jury is to reassemble tomorrow and another continuation is expected. Judge Fisher, meanwhile, is continuing his grand jury pending the high court's ruling.

"No matter if the Feinberg and Fisher grand juries investigate receiverships, the bar association investigation will proceed," Attorney Latham announced.

Shortly after the judicial controversy started it was asserted that Judge Feinberg's purpose was to show that he had acted no differently from other judges. A list of appointments of receivers and receivers' attorneys was made public and purported to show that many judges appointed their own relatives or relatives of their friends, or that their appointments were political. An effort was made to show that Democratic judges favored a Democratic organization—the Cook County Trust company—and gave it numerous receiverships.

Individual lawyers had complained that their recommendations for appointments of receivers were not followed by the courts. Several judges responded with the explanation that they would rather appoint some one they knew and could trust than a stranger suggested by the litigants' lawyers.

The Number of Receiverships.

Attorney Latham, upon being appointed to succeed Attorney Hart who had resigned as chairman of the bar committee, said he did not know how many receiverships were pending in Cook county. One lawyer said he believed there are 75,000. Yesterday Mr. Latham said he did not believe there are more than 15,000.

It was pointed out that many apartment buildings and smaller hotels are in receivership as well as a great many business concerns.

In the bar association's publication an editorial said one complaint is that precinct captains are being appointed receivers for political reasons. This has been more or less admitted in political circles although it is ward committeemen rather than precinct committeemen who get the plums.

Lawyers report that since the various investigations have been proposed there has been some discussion about supplanting objectionable receivers with others. Political leaders proposed that if a business or property in a certain ward were involved in receivership proceedings the judge should ask the committeeman of that ward [of the judge's party or faction] to recommend a receiver.

Hit Self Seeking Lawyers.

In discussing this policy judges and political leaders said such a method would forestall the lawyer who hurries to be the first to file a suit asking receivership so he and his associates may share in all the fees to come from such litigation. It was admitted by Mr. Latham that such lawyers have profited greatly.

There are more than 100 Cook county banks in receiverships. The state auditor names the receivers and their attorneys for state banks. Auditor Oscar Nelson says that the receivers under his jurisdiction are on a salary basis. However, there are separate receivership proceedings under ordinary court control when depositors take action to collect under the stockholders' liability statute. The state auditor has nothing to do with the appointment of these receivers.

The auditor's office says that immediately upon a bank's being closed lawyers would solicit the signature of a depositor and hurry into court asking appointment of a receiver. There is a similar rush into court in ordinary commercial receiverships.

Way to Frustrate "Ring."

In behalf of the judges of the two courts having power to appoint receivers and attorneys for receivers—the Circuit and Superior—the statement was made that while the courts cannot reject such applications for receiverships, they can frustrate the "receivership ring" by refusing to accept recommendations on appointments from those lawyers. Many concerns have been plunged into bankruptcy while still solvent because some lawyer representing a creditor who had a bill past due "hurried into court," it was explained.

Mr. Latham said his committee intends to scrutinize the fees of all receivers and their attorneys, whether they are "court" appointees or "lawyer" appointees, and the fees allowed masters in chancery, as well. One complainant had said that in order for a receiver to get court permission to pay a $15 bill it was necessary to incur a master's expense of $15.

Committee Meets Tomorrow.

The task is so large, Mr. Latham explained, that probably only the larger receiverships will be studied. At a committee meeting tomorrow subcommittees are to be appointed and plans of procedure evolved.

Asked what coud be done if any of the judges were found to have exceeded the bounds of propriety Mr. Latham said punishment could be inflicted through impeachment. Only the legislature can impeach a judge.

The entire Circuit bench—90 judges—comes up for reelection next year—June, 1932—and it was known that Bar association officials have that fact in mind in connection with the investigation.

HURRICANE KILLS 500 IN FRENCH INDO-CHINA; TOWNS ARE WRECKED

HANOI, French Indo-China, May 8.—(AP)—Five hundred persons were killed, including several Europeans, by a hurricane which swept in from the China sea across the southern tip of the state of Annam last Wednesday, it was learned today.

The coastal town of Phanthiet, some 75 miles east of Saigon, capital of French Cochin-China, and the town of Bangoy, 80 miles farther along the coastal railway, appeared to be the worst victims of the storm.

Information was very difficult to obtain from many parts of the stricken area, because of wrecked communications, but it was determined that railways, bridges, roads, and farms had been torn up over the 80 mile coastal area. The towns of Cana and Dran were obliterated by the wind and the European population of Cana was shelterless. Several hundred natives were drowned or otherwise killed.

SLIDES BURY 26 IN 2 APARTMENTS OF LYONS, FRANCE

HerriotSupervisesRescue of 12 Injured.

LYONS, France, May 9 [Monday].—(AP)—Landslides that buried two apartment houses in the middle class Caluire district on the outskirts of Lyons yesterday endangered the life of former Premier Edouard Herriot and were feared to have killed 26 persons who were reported missing after the slides.

Twelve persons were removed from the débris with serious injuries before rescuers were warned away by M. Herriot, mayor of Lyons, who jumped to safety only when the last rescuer had left the danger zone.

Cries were heard in the ruins last night, however, and despite the danger of further slides rescue workers renewed their efforts. At midnight they discovered a woman pinned by a beam. She said she was unhurt and stimulants were passed to her.

The first landslide occurred about 9 a. m. before many of the residents had awakened. It hit the buildings in the rear and cracked the gas mains.

Explosions, Fires Follow.

Explosions and fires followed. The fire department responded and rescued twelve persons before a second and larger slide came down the hillside.

Both buildings collapsed under the strain. Fire Chief Rossignol suffered a broken leg and was dragged to safety just in time.

Firemen were driven off to a distance, from where they shot streams of water into the smoking ruins in a desperate effort to stop the flames so rescuers could get in to the débris.

Soldiers were on hand to carry out this work.

Herriot Lives Nearby.

The Caluire district is inhabited by professional and business men, whose homes and small apartments dot the steep hillsides. Herriot lives a few blocks away and went immediately to the ruins. He helped bring out the bodies of two women. Later he left for Paris.

The accident follows upon by less than two years similar landslides on Fourviere hill.

VELMA GREETED BY COPS INSTEAD OF A BRIDEGROOM

A detective squad was waiting in place of her expected bridegroom yesterday when Velma Baker, 18 years old, of West Frankfort, Ill., got off a train in the Dearborn street station.

She was unworried, even when the police told her that she was arrested on a charge of burglary. The arrest had been asked by West Frankfort police, who told Chicago authorities that she had stolen a coat.

"That's just my father," she explained. "He's William Baker, a state oil inspector. He did it to keep me from marrying Pat Hanson, who was supposed to meet me at the train. I pawned my engagement ring for $18 down in Benton to pay my fare up here."

She was taken to the detective bureau to await a further message from her parents. The police were unable to find Hanson, who, Velma said, lived at 4732 Belden avenue.

RECALL $121,000 PAID RICHBERG IN GAS LITIGATION

Wilkerson Foe Long on Public Pay Roll.

Attorney Donald R. Richberg's criticism of the fees and salaries approved by Judge Wilkerson in connection with cases in his court has called attention anew to the fact that, while those fees and salaries were paid by private corporations, Richberg himself drew correspondingly large amounts from public funds.

Detailed inquiry disclosed that as one of the original city hall "experts" Richberg drew as much as $15,669 in one year while he was in charge of the long drawn out and futile effort to recover refunds for gas consumers in a battle over rates.

In all he received $121,000 of the taxpayers' money in that suit which, prolonged as it was while Richberg was in control, took a total of $682,000 out of the city treasury. The litigation, under Richberg's leadership, was dragged out for ten years and was terminated abruptly when, over Richberg's protest, a test case was taken to the Illinois Supreme court.

The gas litigation arose from the passage of an ordinance by the city council attempting to fix the price per 1,000 cubic feet at 75 cents. The gas company obtained an injunction granted with the condition that it could charge 80 cents but must refund the difference between the two rates in the event the ordinance was sustained by the courts.

Richberg was engaged as special counsel by the council committee on gas, oil and electricity and was given the assistance of engineers and accountants. From time to time the attorney made reports of "progress," which usually preceded requests for further appropriations.

In his first year, 1914, his bill was a modest one—for only $425. In the following year when a Republican mayor—who later served two more terms—came into office the bill rose to $5,353. Then in 1916 it jumped to $11,400 and in 1917 it went up a couple of more thousands to $14,432, a figure that was duplicated the following year.

And the figures for those two years were beaten twice before the case was terminated. In 1921 Richberg received $15,225 and in 1925 he got $15,669.

During this same decade engineers retained upon Richberg's recommendation were drawing large amounts from the city. The chief of these, E. W. Bemis, received approximately $350,000. And the sum totals for legal, engineering, and accounting services reached huge figures in some years. In 1916 the total cost of the case to the city's taxpayers was $105,227. In 1917 it was $137,964 and in 1918 it was $160,639.

Some lawyers contended that much of this expenditure could have been saved if the case had been handled differently. On two occasions, while corporation counsel, Samuel A. Ettelson engaged in controversies with Richberg.

"I regard Mr. Richberg's handling of gas matters," said Ettelson during one of these tilts, "as the rankest betrayal of the rights of the people of Chicago ever perpetrated by a member of the bar of this city."

SCHOOL BOARD HEARS STRAYER REPORT TODAY

Expert to Discuss Costs at Special Meeting.

The board of education will hold a special session this afternoon to hear the suggestions of Dr. George D. Strayer, expert of Columbia university, on reducing the cost of Chicago's public school system. A complete report of Dr. Strayer's findings will not be made until June 1.

Dr. Strayer and his staff are under contract to investigate and report to the school board "any excesses in cost" and to recommend improvements in the school system. For they work they will be paid $100,000.

Resolution Passes.

Today's meeting was called following the passage by the board last week of a resolution of Trustee William D. McJunkin asking for an outline of education plans to fit an $80,000,000 budget, also $70,000,000 and $60,000,000 ones. The board has adopted a budget of $90,180,263 for 1932.

According to Ralph Condee, assistant attorney for the board, the budget cannot legally be reduced. "However," said Mr. Condee, "the trustees will not be compelled to spend all that money."

When Dr. Strayer telegraphed Lewis E. Myers, president of the school board, that he would appear before the board in response to the resolution, he announced that he could furnish a part of the information. It was reported that the board would hold a closed meeting, but several trustees, including President Myers, have declared since then that it would be open.

JUNIOR HIGH ISSUE

BY OSCAR HEWITT.

The Chicago board of education has spent $28,500,000 on 17 new junior high school buildings in the last six years. The theory of such schools was advocated as sound and progressive by many educators, but their establishment was not requested by the parents of the pupils.

On the contrary there were four instances in which school officials threatened to call the police in order to get junior high schools opened without trouble and at two schools the police were actually summoned.

On one of these junior high school buildings—the Parker, at Sixty-eighth street and Stewart avenue—Gov. Emmerson's tax conference charged eight months ago there was an "excess profit" of $500,000. The school trustees denied this. The building cost $2,295,801, so that the charged waste on this structure was nearly 22 per cent.

No Investigation Made.

No investigation has been made by the board to determine whether this percentage of waste runs through the remaining $26,200,000 spent on new junior high schools. But the board did employ Columbia university, with Dr. George D. Strayer in charge, to make a comprehensive investigation of the Chicago schools at a cost of $100,000.

The contract provides that Dr. Strayer and staff shall make a survey of the present school buildings, the "cost of construction" with "a view to the discovery of any savings." Dr. Strayer has promised to give the board some of the information it has requested at a special meeting of the trustees today in order that they may trim their $90,180,263 budget within the possibility of financing.

Closed in St. Louis.

It is expected that Dr. Strayer will attempt to justify the junior high school idea, although the city of St. Louis closed three of its four junior high schools last year as a means of retrenching in a spot in the school system where the least injury would be inflicted.

By some educators the junior high school is described as bridging the gap between the elementary and high schools, while by others and many parents it is looked upon as widening the gap and adding an expense which has not yet been demonstrated as justified.

A junior high school is composed of the seventh and eighth grade pupils of surrounding elementary schools and the first year pupils of a regular high school. It is claimed that "a new approach" — a new method of teaching — has been developed for the junior school which is of benefit to the pupils.

But opponents of the new system say no convincing evidence has been made public from the regular high schools showing that a pupil in the seventh and eighth grade is better educated in a junior high school than he would be in an elementary school.

Board "Tells" Difference.

The official booklet of the board of education advertising the junior high schools tells how it is "different from an elementary school" as follows:

"The art and music rooms and the gymnasium in junior high schools give boys and girls a great deal of fun and benefit. Art and music are specially planned to let you try out your powers along these lines. You can experiment with painting, carving, pottery, modeling, batik, tie and dye work, gesso modeling, designing and drawing; you can do part or chorus singing, or play in the fife and drum corps or orchestra; in fact, you get a chance to do whatever you can with your talents."

When the board was getting the Parker Junior High school under way the South End Public School association was organized and incorporated.

Leaflet Sent to Taxpayers.

It sent a leaflet to the taxpayers of the Seventeenth and Nineteenth wards, which began:

"Is the proposed erection of a $2,500,000 junior high school on the Parker campus with a seating capacity of 2,200 a justifiable expenditure of public funds under adverse local condition?" Then followed an argument against the school. It ended with an estimated $250,000,000 expenditure "if the board makes its junior high school system uniform throughout the city." That was March 25, 1929, but since then the estimated cost of a complete junior high school system has been lowered to $150,000,000.

FARMERS TO RECEIVE 39 PCT. OF RETAIL PRICE PAID FOR MILK

With the price of milk at 11 cents a quart beginning tomorrow, dairy farmers will receive a greater percentage of the cost to the consumer than ever before. Of the 11 cents dairy farmers will receive 39 per cent, union labor 41 per cent, and the dealers 20 per cent.

The 1 cent reduction, an estimated daily savings to consumers of $10,000, was announced Saturday by Dr. Clyde L. King of Philadelphia, arbitrator, at the close of two days of negotiations. The reduction is the third 1 cent cut in 16 months, and brings milk 21.4 per cent under the 1930 price.

There will be no change in the price of milk per pint, now at 8 cents. It is estimated that 9 quarts of milk are sold to every pint. Those who formerly purchased a pint of milk each day now take a quart every other day, dealers said. The greatest sale of pints is in factories and offices.

In pennies the 11 cents of the consumer will be split at 4.47 cents to labor, 4.29 to farmers, and 2.24 to distributors. This share is to be taken by 18,200 farmers in 26 counties and three states, who supply the city. The farmers have a total investment of $364,000,000. Of this sum between $8,000,000 and $10,000,000 has been expended in the past three years to meet the rigid health requirements of the city.

The decision of Dr. King is regarded as a victory for the dairy farmers.

AIRPLANE TRAILS PIGEON TO HOME OF EXTORTIONISTS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BUENOS AIRES, May 8.—Police today captured a band of blackmailers by using a plane to trail a homing pigeon.

The extortionists yesterday sent a boy to Julian Castro of San Fernando with a cage containing a carrier pigeon, together with a note demanding that he liberate the pigeon this afternoon with a thousand peso bill [about $250] attached to its leg. "Your head depends on faithfully following instructions," said the note.

Castro took the note to police, who enlisted the aid of the aviator Guillermo Hillcoat to follow and watch where the pigeon descended. The aviator succeeded in locating approximately the place, after which police raided the neighboring dove cotes and finally located the extortionists.

BLUE LAWS GONE, BALTIMORE HAS LIBERAL SUNDAY

Baltimore, Md., May 8.—[Special.]—With its objectionable shackles as expressed in 200 year old blue laws removed, Baltimore today for the first time in its history celebrated a liberal Sunday. A coincidence was that a greater attendance at churches of all denominations was registered at the morning services.

Today citizens of Baltimore and visitors could do many things legally which they could not do a week ago. Among the things they could do legally were visit theaters and pay admissions after 2 p. m., attend baseball, soccer, bowling, and other games. More than 100,000 visited the moving picture theaters.

At stores, mostly neighborhood and delicatessen shops, one could buy cooked foods, bread, and milk and at drug stores all manner of medical supplies, toilet articles, and virtually all things sold by drug stores without violating the law.

OUR UNCLE SAM IS BENEVOLENT, NEPOTISTS FIND

Relatives Who Labor Not Cling to Pay Roll.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., May 8.—[Special.]—To the average citizen Uncle Sam is a legendary figure, most frequently personified in actual life by the tax collector.

To several hundred congressional wives and sons and daughters, nieces and nephews who labor not but appear on the federal pay roll Uncle Sam is a near, real, and benevolent relative.

Though the current drive for governmental economy accomplish nothing else, it has served to focus public attention—and public indignation, it might be added—on the congressional habit of nepotism by which senators and representatives foist their kinfolk upon the public bounty.

Loss of Office Proposed.

The taxpayers are watching the fight being made by Representative J. R. Mitchell [Dem., Tenn.] to win consideration of his bill to provide that any member of congress who puts a relative on the legislative pay roll shall forfeit his office and be subject to a fine of from $1,000 to $10,000. Witness to the popular interest in the fate of the Mitchell bill are the scores of letters the Tennessee congressman is receiving every day.

The Mitchell bill was referred to the committee on accounts, and it is up to Representative Lindsay C. Warren [Dem., N. C.], committee chairman, to see that it gets a hearing.

One of the committee members is Representative Lafayette L. Patterson [Dem., Ala.]. Perhaps it is mere coincidence that Mr. Patterson's wife is Mrs. Nannie J. Patterson and that the latest report of the house shows a Nannie J. Patterson listed among the house members' clerks.

Name Same as Daughter's.

Representative Charles L. Underhill [Rep., Mass.], now ranking minority member of the committee, was chairman during the Republican régime. During that period Phoebe W. Underhill, whose name is the same as that of Mr. Underhill's daughter, appeared as clerk to the committee.

It is a grand game—for every one except the taxpayer.

It is played by the high and the low in congressional circles.

Senator Simeon D. Fess of Ohio, chairman of the Republican national committee, whose voice is often lifted on the side of righteousness and prohibition, is one of the more prominent nepotists on the senate side. One of his clerks is Dorothy Fess, his daughter-in-law, who draws $2,200 a year. She spends her time back in Ohio.

Brookhart Family Gets $25,000.

Sometimes the nepotism game grows into a real family pastime. Senator Smith Wildman Brookhart, Iowa's radical Republican, who believes in bigger and higher taxes for the rich and more and better government jobs for the little fellow, supplies an instance. According to charges recently made by Henry Field, Brookhart's rival for the Republican senatorial nomination in Iowa, the Brookhart family dips $25,000 out of the treasury every year. In addition to the senator, two sons, a daughter, and two brothers are on the federal pay roll.

Senator John C. Townsend [Rep., Del.] whose biography states that he is actively interested in farming, fruit growing, and banking, is also president of the Highway Engineering and Construction company of Delaware, which for some time has been doing about $200,000 worth of work a year for the government. Senator Townsend's son, Paul, is vice president of the construction company; but he also draws $3,900—the highest salary allowed for any clerk—as his father's secretary.

Hopes for Showdown.

Representative Mitchell has no delusions concerning the passage of his bill. He knows that too many members of congress would be affected by it. He has hopes, however, that under the new house rules permitting 145 members to petition for the discharge of a committee he may at least get a showdown vote on the nepotism bill.

"We talk about pay cuts to include the pay of congressmen," he said. "The upright member who refuses to load the pay roll with relatives will get an eleven per cent cut, so that his salary will become $8,900. The nepotist, who has two $2,500 relatives on the pay roll whose salaries will be exempt, will be cut $1,100 on a family income of $15,000, or only 7 1-3 per cent."

Representative Grant E. Mouser Jr. [Rep., O.] attempted to attach an anti-nepotism amendment to the economy bill when the measure was in the house a few days ago. But the amendment was voted down, without a roll call, by a majority of 88 to 40.

Representatives Robert H. Clancy [Rep., Mich.] and John D. Clarke [Rep., N. Y.] were particularly amused at Mr. Mouser's efforts. When Mr. Mouser mentioned a non-working mother-in-law who was on the pay roll, Mr. Clarke inquired whether Mr. Mouser did not think that was an excellent place to keep a mother-in-law.

To which Mr. Mouser retorted:

"My good friend, John Clarke, wants his mother-in-law to have a feather bed."

Modernistic Bus Designed for 1933 World's Fair

Design for 60 passenger carriers which will take care of intramural transportation at the Century of Progress exposition. In pleasant weather the sides of buses will be open, affording opportunity for passengers to see with greater ease.

Contract Is Given

A specially designed bus, modernistic in lines and colors, has been adopted by the World Fair committee for intramural transportation at the exposition next year. The General Motors Truck company has a $300,000 contract to supply sixty of these automotive passenger carriers.

Each unit consists of a tractor coupled to a trailer that will seat fifty persons and furnish standing room for forty-five more. Two wide doors and a low floor will permit easy exit and entrance. The sides of the trailer, in pleasant weather, will be open for sightseeing. The buses will operate within the three and a half miles of exposition grounds along the lake front.

WM. H. MILLER BANK TRIAL TO BE ASKED TODAY

State's Attorney A. V. Smith of Lake county said yesterday that he was dissatisfied with progress of efforts to reorganize the defunct Waukegan State bank and would ask that William H. Miller, former director of the bank, be tried immediately when he appears today before Circuit Judge E. D. Shurtleff at Waukegan on a charge of conspiracy.

Miller, a former vice president of the National Bank of the Republic in Chicago, was indicted with George Woodruff, former chairman of that bank, State Auditor Oscar Nelson and Norman O Geyer, who was president of the Waukegan State bank. The other defendants obtained changes of venue to McHenry county.

The cases have been postponed a number of times on assurances that depositors would be saved from loss under a plan to reopen the Waukegan State bank as the Citizens Bank and Trust company of Waukegan. State's Attorney Smith said yesterday that he was unwilling to delay the criminal prosecutions any longer pending the bank reorganization.

Man Defacing Lincoln's Statue Seized by Police

Robert Campbell, 67 years old, 871 North La Salle street, was arrested yesterday by South Park Policeman George Lundy, who alleged that he was using a hammer and a chisel to deface the statue of Lincoln at Van Buren street and Michigan avenue. Campbell, whose pockets were filled with literature of Esnkaye, the political-fraternal organization of Edward Young Clarke, denied the charge.

FALLS DEAD IN HIS HOME.

August Maisa, 50 years old, 1500 North Artesian avenue, fell dead yesterday at his home. Heart disease apparently was the cause of death.

HUNGRY RUSSIAN RAFTSMEN VIEW FOOD FAIRYLAND

Fill Up on "Luxuries" on Trip to Riga.

BY DONALD DAY.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

RIGA, Latvia, May 8.—Spring floods have brought the first Russian rafts to Riga, Europe's largest lumber port. Emaciated Russian raftsmen and their wives have been sleeping for weeks in litters of rags in tiny straw-thatched huts and cooking their meals in iron pots and tin cans over fires built on a bed of small stones held together by a wooden frame. Until they reached the Latvian border their fare consisted of barley porridge and boiled potatoes.

Coming down the Dvina river, they have already visited the Latvian markets in Kraslava, Daugavpils, Plavinas and other towns. They have been living "royally" on their pay of 20 cents a day. They have salt herring, salt pork, dill pickles and blackbread, the Russian peasant's staple foods, daily. On Sundays they pool their funds and buy a suckling pig for 20 cents and boil it with sourkraut. And despite the back-breaking job of piloting the huge rafts down a flooded river some of the men bragged of gaining four and five pounds on the trip.

Taken to Delousing Plant.

Paid off in Riga, the raftsmen are taken to a special delousing plant where, after being bathed and scrubbed, they are permitted to rest a few days before returning to their homes in the Vitebsk district. They first pass a preliminary medical examination on the Latvian frontier as a precaution against any typhus invasion.

When I entered their stuffy room, the Russians were discussing their new underwear provided by the local Red Cross. They eyed me sullenly and the two bottles of vodka I had brought as a peace offering did not allay their suspicions. A chunk of salt pork and a piece of blackbread appeased them, for a Russian does not like to drink unless he can eat at the same time.

No one could not buy bread in the Vitebsk market. There was a famine in White Russia. Thirty-six pounds of coarse ground rye flour could sometimes be obtained for $35. Dried fish cost $2.00 each. Eggs and butter disappeared from Vitebsk eighteen months ago. There was no meat to be had, not even salt pork.

"Pigs Scarcer than Priests."

"Pigs," said a red bearded peasant, "are scarcer than orthodox priests."

"We all work for rubles now," another peasant said. "Before we had our farms. But they imposed the produce tax and made us contribute to volunteer loans. We were compelled to accept bonds for the little grain they left us. We were always in debt to the government. Formerly if we had a short crop and had to borrow seed we paid the kulak [rich peasant] 30 and 40 per cent of our harvest. Now the government takes it all.

"We worked less and less and hid our grain in the wood. Then the farms were collectivized. It's like working in a factory. Everybody is on the pay roll. The rubles don't buy anything. They sent away our grain and promised us tractors. There is no iron for horseshoes. The saws they give us for lumbering break. Each year there is less food and more work. There is no use in working any more."

They reported the situation in Russia today as worse than in the springs of 1920 and 1921. At that time, they said, there were districts with plenty of food, but the distribution of it had since broken down. At that time "sackmen," traders who traveled with sacks of food, managed to keep the towns supplied. The raftsmen insisted that conditions similar to those in White Russia now prevail throughout the entire country.

Even in the Ukraine, south of White Russia and known as the granary of Europe, there is no food.

"Peasants who wandered around the country working a few weeks at a time at Dneiprostroy, Magnitogorsk, the Nishni Novgorod auto plant, and in the Donnetz coal basin are returning home," a raftsman cried. "Their quest for better food was fruitless. Many factories are being closed. They have no fuel and raw material, and Moscow and other industrial districts again have their unemployed."

Market Lures Visitors.

The raftsmen later left Riga's immigrant house and walked across the bridge over the Dvina into one of Europe's most modern markets.

An old German woman bent double with rheumatism presented the group with two lemons. Another woman bought them half of a large loaf of raisin bread. After half an hour the raftsmen were loaded with gifts—black bread, bacon, meat, strings of the little smoked Baltic herring, even butter. They returned to the river bank to eat again.

To the younger raftsmen Riga's market was a fairyland. They said they had never seen so much food in their lives.

SHOOT EXTORTIONIST; FORMER SCHOOLMATE OF INTENDED VICTIM

Wharton, Tex., May 8.—(AP)—Texas rangers lying in wait for an extortionist beside a Jackson county creek at dusk shot and wounded Roy Henderson of Edna, Tex., one time schoolmate of the intended victim, Leveridge Stockton, banker.

Stockton, receiving letters demanding $5,000 under threat of death to himself and kidnaping of his 4 year old daughter, notified rangers. Acting under directions he took a dummy package to the creek bank site named by the extortionist and left.

The rangers said Henderson approached, stooped to pick up the package and fled when hailed. He was shot in the leg and captured.

Henderson, who is being held in the county jail here, denied he was the plotter. He said he had been hunting squirrels along the creek.

Pavement Gives Way; Auto Carrying 3 Drops 10 Feet

Mrs. Marie Ialongo, 9603 Avenue M, was driving yesterday with her brother and sister, Rudolph and Quent Dinocenzo, when the pavement suddenly gave way beneath the automobile at 103d street and Hoxie avenue and the car dropped into a hole 10 feet deep. The three occupants escaped injury. The pavement had been weakened by rains which washed sand from beneath the concrete, police said. Mrs. Ialongo's husband, Tony, a grape merchant, was taken for a gang ride and murdered a few months ago.

DE VALERA FACES REVOLT AGAINST HIS HIGH TAXES

Industry Is Thrown Into Chaos by New Levies.

BY HUGH CURRAN.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

DUBLIN, May 8.—An extraordinary change has developed in the Irish Free State political situation. The question of abolishing the oath of allegiance to the British king has obscured the original cha[use] precipitated by a series of prohibitive tariff orders.

EAMON DE VALERA

Duties of 75 per cent on automobiles and 150 per cent on automobile bodies have driven the automobile trade to distraction. Yesterday cargoes of new cars of British manufacture arriving in Dublin were returned to their makers.

While the new tariff is intended to compel the manufacture of automobiles here, actually no plant exists which is capable of completing cars, and only a few are fit to make car bodies.

Expect Big Whisky Tax.

The tariff also includes horsedrawn vehicles. This has caused chaos on the North Ireland border. Bread vans which ordinarily go daily from Derry and Strabane into Donegal have been turned back because of the heavy tax demand. Other taxes on clothing, boots and agricultural machinery are greatly resented by the people.

The budget, which is scheduled to be introduced in the Dail Eireann next Wednesday, is expected to produce another string of tariffs as well as an increase of a shilling [normally 25 cents] per pound [normally $5] in the income tax rates. Scotch whisky is expected to be taxed 20 shillings [normally $5] a gallon.

Protests against these taxes reveal that President de Valera's supporters are among the sufferers. One protest in behalf of the motor trade was signed by Seamus Moore, a Fianna Fail deputy who expected to be a minister in the De Valera cabinet.

Hits De Valera's Followers.

In the boot trade many De Valera supporters have been made destitute by new taxes. Unemployment is threatened in many fields, although the government today issued a statement showing much reëmployment in newly protected industries.

People are talking of an early election, in which case many think that De Valera would be defeated. An election is hardly likely before August, however, because of the Eucharistic congress in June.

Meanwhile De Valera has ordered a general prosecution of farmers who are in arrears on land annuity payments. This will further detract from the government's popularity, as many farmers believed that if De Valera were elected president they would not need to pay these annuities.

FLYER HELD IN DEATH OF AVIATRIX'S FIANCE TO LEARN FATE TODAY

Miami, Fla., May 8.—(AP)—Capt. W. N. Lancaster, held for first degree murder in connection with the mysterious death of Haden Clarke, tomorrow will be advised of the disposition of the case by the Dade county grand jury.

The jurors, who heard two days' presentation of evidence by State's Attorney N. Vernon Hawthorne, will report whether they indicted the British flyer or freed him.

Lancaster and Mrs. J. M. Keith-Miller, noted aviatrix and fiancée of Clarke, have expressed their belief that he will be held for trial on a first degree murder count.

A HAPSBURG GOES INTO BUSINESS OF DRESSMAKING

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

VIENNA, May 8.—A curious complaint lodged with a magistrate by local Socialists revealed today that one more proud Hapsburg has gone to work, this time in the dressmaking business.

The story leaked out after formal objection had been made against Archduchess Franziska Hapsburg [nee Princess Hohenzollern] selling dresses in the palace Mayr-Melinhof on the fashionable Argentinierstrasse. A magistrate was assigned to find out why the archduchess had held a style show and sold dresses without a state license. When the police arrived they found everybody out and when they nosed around in the palace they found no dresses. They had all been sold.

Investigation divulged that the archduchess, who lives in Munich with her husband, Archduke Max Hapsburg, had brought into Austria scores of dresses from a Munich couturier. She told customs officers that they were her own. In the Vienna palace she held a style show and Viennese society had rushed to see and buy.

TIGHTEN GUARD FOR MUSSOLINI AT FARM SHOW

ROME, May 8.—(AP)—Armed guards protected Premier Mussolini today as they have never done before, when he appeared at the inauguration of the agricultural exposition.

Hundreds of persons with special passes were barred from the exposition. The premier went one hour earlier than scheduled and riflemen patrolled the vicinity.

The assassination of President Doumer of France inspired extraordinary vigilance.

College Girl Is Killed, 3 Hurt in Auto Wreck

Northampton, Mass., May 8.—[Special.]—Miss Maxine Clark, Smith college junior of Brooklyn, N. Y., was killed and a girl classmate was seriously injured, as were their two young men companions, when a truant midnight automobile dash from South Hadley to the college dormitories ended in a wreck.

"The newspaper is an institution developed by modern civilization to present the news of the day, to foster commerce and industry, to inform and mold public opinion, and to furnish that check upon government which no constitution has ever been able to provide."

LAWN MOWERS OR MACHINE GUNS?

Mr. Hoover, in his special message on economy, said that "the whole federal expenditure, except about 1,700 million dollars, is for uncontrollable obligations."

How this figure was arrived at is not entirely clear. Obviously, the meaning of the statement must turn upon definition of the word "uncontrollable." Strictly speaking, there is only one large item in the budget that is uncontrollable and that is the service of the debt. For 1932 the treasury estimates this item as slightly more than 1,000 million dollars. As the total expenditures run well over 4,000 million dollars, there remain some 3,000 million dollars which can be regarded strictly as controllable.

But whether the controllable portion of the budget is called 1,700 million or 3,000 million dollars is somewhat beside the point. The fundamentally important fact is that the government is devoting huge sums to departmental purposes which can easily be saved. The principle holds good not only in the departments and bureaus which never should have been established but also in precisely those departments which perform the services for which the United States government was created.

We may pass over such excrescences and futilities as the prohibition bureau and turn directly to the army and navy. To support them is mandatory and essential, but only a man who knows nothing at all about the armed forces of this country could think for a moment that the amounts which have been spent in recent years are not excessive in relation to the fighting values of the two services. This country could have much more protection than it is getting for the amount it is spending or it could have the same protection for much less than it now pays.

The army and navy between them must be the largest purchasers of lawn mowers on the planet. Just how pushing a lawn mower and laying out tulip beds promotes the military security of the United States is one of those questions to raise which is regarded as tactless. However, the moment has come when such questions must be raised if the necessity for reducing federal taxation is not to destroy the national defense.

As a matter of fact, both the army and the navy would be benefited by a reduction of the appropriations for maintaining expensive posts and shore stations. Infantrymen ought to be learning to handle machine guns instead of lawn mowers. The naval personnel ought to be, to the largest possible extent, assigned to sea duty rather than to flower bed duty.

If a large part of the service appropriations is being diverted to activities having little to do with defense the reasons are easily found. In the first place, the officers of the army and navy take a natural and wholly explicable pleasure in living in pleasant surroundings. Well kept lawns are a delight, and the greater their sweep the greater the pleasure they afford. If, in addition, the army and navy personnel are assigned to posts in attractive sections of the country, and particularly to stations close to the metropolitan cities, the life of the officer and his family is rendered as pleasant as physical surroundings can make it.

The desire of the officers to have delightful homes is fortified by the desire of merchants to continue to cater to the army and navy trade. In combination, these two interests account for such expensive establishments as are to be found on Governors' island in New York harbor, for example, and the numerous and for much the most part antiquated forts which protected the harbor a hundred years ago but are now obsolete. With any revival in the real estate market, Governors' island could be sold at a price which would make a dent in the national debt without entailing any loss in military efficiency. Likewise the forts could go. All the expense of keeping them as garden spots could be saved and the men now engaged in pushing lawn mowers could be taught to defend their country.

As a matter of fact, the concentration of the army's personnel and of the navy's shore services at a few strategic points would serve to increase military efficiency. One of the great faults of our regular army as a training ground for all ranks has been the small size of the units under one command at any point. The result has been that our officers have little experience in handling even moderately large groups of men. The navy has suffered, though perhaps to a less extent, from a similar dispersion of its personnel.

Until the lawn mowers are beaten into machine guns it is ridiculous to pretend that the country is getting its money's worth for the 700 million dollars a year it is spending for its army and navy. Here is one category of the budget that is certainly not "uncontrollable" in the sense in which Mr. Hoover uses the word.

ALL IN SILKEN GOWNS.

The season at the Court of St. James's opens this week while Mr. Mellon, recently arrived in London as American ambassador, is still finding his way about. It is understood that he will take advantage of his years and make as little as possible of his duties to the American dowagers and debutantes unloaded on the embassy by American politics for presentation. There being no lady in the embassy qualified to present the candidates who have survived the sifting out processes, the courtesy of a foreigner must be implored. (A thought occurs that Mrs. Gann might be given the qualifications and then invested in the post for life with full power to select. Be still, O beating heart!)

Pocahontas was the first American lady presented, but Americans do not follow their own traditions, adhering rather to the British, as, indeed, they are required to do. Otherwise their feathers would be native. With the aboriginal headdress and some use of the lip stick on the cheek bones and forehead the Yankee dowagers and debutantes might brighten a court considerably. The king and queen on their side are entitled to a little more fun.

The male heads of American families whose ladies make amends for Thomas Jefferson have no formal course of procedure laid down for them for the occasion. To the court they are nonexistent. Only the females approach to bend the knee. It may not be implied that the males, although nothing to look at, are unworthy. The point against them has never been made clear, but, anyway, they are on their own. If they are in London they may spend the time in public houses of a low sort, if that be their taste, and get jingled, reflecting that they are still commoners and getting commoner and commoner. If of a more spiritual nature they might spend the time in rapt contemplation. There is no rule. They may join the English Speaking union and forgive the debt. In thoroughly bad taste they might read the Declaration of Independence and get a laugh and then go out to make a round of the public houses.

Some day one or more of these negligible American males will be run over by a cab while the ladies are at court, but the ladies will not care. After a presentation the men will never be missed again. The ladies have gone out of their lives forever, the poor clods.

GOVERNOR EMMERSON REFUSES CLEMENCY.

Gov. Emmerson has denied fifty petitions for executive clemency in behalf of convicts serving sentences for serious crimes, seventeen murder and manslaughter cases from Cook county being included. It can be said for the present governor that he has displayed a very different temper toward justice than was revealed in the administration before him. In that administration notorious crooks were released to return to their ways of life at the expense principally of Chicago.

Mr. Emmerson has shown backbone and purpose. He has not regarded a prison sentence as a mere incident in the life of a criminal to be terminated as soon as possible by the state. He has upheld the verdicts of the courts and the sentences of the law, and the administration of justice is the better for his acts.

ASSASSINATION.

Apparently, from first indications, a mental derangement led to the assassination of President Doumer of France, although rumors and possibilities of a purposive crime are being investigated. The elderly president of the French republic might have been regarded as safe except from the most eccentric or unbalanced person affected by a fancy of affairs of state. Distinction of place attracts the occasional attention of the mental misfit, as our own history has proved, and it has not been so many generations ago that there still prevailed Machiavelli's conception of assassination as a state procedure to be expected if not to be used.

Partisans wrought up by emotions and suffering from a sense of national injury even now will make the Italian's theory good, as the world has good cause to remember in Sarajevo and as it saw the other day in Shanghai. With the modification of personal government, of hereditary government and absolutism, such crime in political action lost its veneer of virtue, but it is only in comparatively modern times that it has lost countenance. Something like a consent to it attaints so able and so just a ruler as Dutch William of Great Britain, who was at least careless in what preceded the summary disposal of the recalcitrant clan at Glencoe, and William himself was seldom safe from the attentions of persons who wanted to change the course of events in favor of James Stuart.

Democracy is supposed to have subjected its rulers to ballots and made them immune to bullets. The overbalanced individual, the deranged zealot, always remains on the margin of the scene, occasionally to break through precautions and shock the world.

Editorial of the Day

BILLIONS IN THE RED.

[Des Moines Tribune.]

Recent disclosures concerning the state of municipal finances in some centers of population lead one to wonder if city voters are really blind, deaf, dumb, and paralyzed.

New York City owes today the astounding sum of 2½ billion dollars. That is more than $350 for every man, woman, and child in the city.

Before the war the net debt of the United States was just a trifle over one billion.

Latest figures, tabulated in 1929, place the entire indebtedness of all the 48 states of the Union at 25 per cent less than New York City's total.

And yet there are supposedly intelligent citizens who still say that graft is a necessary adjunct of efficient municipal administration.

In Illinois, "Big Bill" Thompson, during whose reign as mayor Chicago reached financial straits comparable to those of New York, has reëntered politics and has won for his protégé, Len Small, the Republican nomination for the governorship.

Perhaps we have been too harsh, after all.

New York's voters may have been blind, deaf, and dumb, but they are not paralyzed. When good old Jimmy Walker, their Tammany-raised chieftain, appears on his mortgaged streets, they can still applaud and strew figurative posies in his path.

The paralysis may come a bit later.

A LINE O' TYPE OR TWO

How to the Line, let the quips fall where they may. Pvt. Bob.

THEY BOTH WIN! Great Britain finally got Helen Keller to visit her in spite of her stern resolution never to go to Albion's shores until they rescinded the ironclad rule that her little dog, in common with all other visiting dogs, must undergo six months' quarantine. Now Helen is going, but she is to receive an honorary degree of LL. D. at Glasgow university. Well, we'll tell England flat that we will never again visit her shores and put our little hound in jail for six months for any LL. D. from Glasgow university or Cambridge or Oxford, or all three together. We will go to England again only on condition we be given the order of Knight Commander of the Garter, the Order of the Bath, the Freedom of the City of London, an order on the Bank of England for ten thousand pounds sterling, and be made either a duke or a marquis; either one, we're not fussy. And they've got to keep our Sealyham quarantined either at St. James's palace in London or over at the lord mayor's house in the city. And if England doesn't want to meet our offer, then she gets no visit from us. And that's that.

SHADOW CYCLE.

Deep into the garden I walk
with a tired wind, an old wind, at my side.
And wide above us spread the heavy boughs of maple trees, tall and sepulchral.
In this garden there is death.
Cool and white the moon looks down where, in the bushes, the sound of silence
throbs inviolate.

A mute andante is the wind creeping over the grass, unable to reach the silvered lilacs between him and the trees, between him and the moon.

Ah God, how deep and soft this shadow,
how sweet this shadow
with the lilacs' breath!
How gently my heart counts off another day.
When out of this purpling dark the sun will flame, bearing again
the gift of yellow day, with these two hands of mine
I can enfold it to cherish for a while or cast away.
It is the only thing in all this life
I can call mine alone.

And then, deep into this garden
I shall walk another night, the wind again behind me at my feet, to meet death waiting in the shade of leaves upon the grass.

JEANNE DELAMARTER.

NEWS FROM WASHINGTON says Senator Norris is going to bolt the Republican party again and vote for Gov. Roosevelt. The Republicans are said to be working to get Sen. Norris to join the Democratic party so that he will bolt them at election time and vote Republican. It's not such a bad idea.

AND PEOPLE WHO GO to the baseball games, the cinema, and the theater are going to be taxed ten per cent on all tickets costing more than ten cents. So a lot more people are going to find out that there is something rumored to be a depression snoopin' around.

THE ANTI-DRY PARADE in Chicago just before the Republican convention has got a lot of floats planned to show the failure of prohibition to live up to its promises, but there's one thing they've overlooked. There should be a float with a tableau revealing one of the most tragic episodes of the prohibition era. The float shows a fashionable parlor with guests in evening dresses sitting around with sad faces and their tongues hanging out and their hostess standing in the center of the room with an empty cocktail shaker upside down and shrieking in society accents: "That durned bootlegger's trunned me down again. He promised to bring me a case of gin tonight and here it is cocktail time and I hain't seen hide ner hair of him." Ah, here is a little drama, all too common these days, that should be portrayed on one of the anti-prohibition floats. And as it passed solemnly along in front of the frenzied onlookers there wouldn't be a dry eye on the street.

And He Might at That.

Sir: You know I got to thinkin' about somethin' funny yesterday and I laughed right out in church. I got to thinkin' how funny it'd be if Patrick Henry would come back to life. I'll bet that after lookin' over the government an' taxes an' everything the first thing he'd say would be: "Give me death!"

THAT OTTAWA FELLA.

"IT WAS WELL," said the Japanese minister to the U. S. in a speech at Atlantic City, "that the Kellogg-Briand pact to outlaw war should be short and simple, but it may have been too simple." We wonder sometimes if it was too simple or just simple.

CHILDREN'S BLOOD PRESSURE.

THE blood pressure of children is considerably lower than that of adults. While the former are not supposed to have any blood pressure diseases, that may be because so few people have studied the subject and the blood pressure of children is so rarely taken by physicians, or any one else. It might be that routine taking of their blood pressure might tell us a great deal that we do not suspect, just as routine taking of temperatures opened up a great storehouse of information.

The reason for the low blood pressure in children is the fact that different parts of their bodies are growing not at the same rate of speed, and that the rates of growth vary at different ages. For instance, the height is growing according to one schedule, the breadth another, the weight a third, the volume of the heart a fourth, its weight a fifth, the size of the large arteries a sixth, and that of the capillaries a seventh. All seven of these are factors in blood pressure.

Dr. H. G. Richey gives the approximate normal or, perhaps, better said, the average blood pressure at different ages of childhood as follows:

Boys, 5 years of age, about 80.
Boys, 6 years of age, about 85.
Boys, 7 years of age, about 89.
Boys, 8 years of age, about 92.
Boys, 9 years of age, about 95.
Boys, 10 years of age, a little over 95.
Boys, 11 years of age, about 96.
Boys, 12 years of age, about 98.
Boys, 13 years of age, about 101.
Boys, 14 years of age, about 106.
Boys, 15 years of age, about 110.
Boys, 16 years of age, about 112.
Boys, 17 years of age, about 112.
Boys, 18 years of age, about 113.
Boys, 19 years of age, about 117.
Girls, 5 years of age, about 85.
Girls, 6 years of age, about 86.
Girls, 7 years of age, about 89.
Girls, 8 years of age, about 92.
Girls, 9 years of age, about 93.
Girls, 10 years of age, about 96.
Girls, 11 years of age, about 100.
Girls, 12 years of age, about 102.
Girls, 13 years of age, about 103.
Girls, 14 years of age, about 104.
Girls, 15 years of age, about 106.
Girls, 16 years of age, about 107.
Girls, 17 years of age, about 103.
Girls, 18 years of age, about 101.
Girls, 19 years of age, about 105.

A careful study of the blood pressure, according to Dr. Richey, gave considerable light on the growth pattern of the child. A careful study of a young child will enable one to guess pretty well what plan of growth and maturing the child will follow.

Children that are destined to be superior will give evidence of it rather early in life. They grow faster, have more rapid development of the chest and better early development of the lungs and heart. They are left to reach the stopping point early. These observations support studies made in California and Iowa. The additional information they supply is that the rate of increase in blood pressure gives some indication of the expected rate of growth. Dr. Richey found that in children the blood pressure varied rather widely without indicating that anything was wrong.

Some additional information is gained by studying the relations of the systolic, diastolic, and pulse pressures to each other. In adults we say that fainting occurs when the systolic pressure suddenly drops to 80 or below. In the case of children we do not know at what level fainting occurs. It may be at a figure that is two-thirds of the normal for that age.

WHOOPING COUGH.

Mrs. G. E. B. writes: You advised a woman whose son vomited when he had the whooping cough. My six year old son also vomited until he was skin and bone. Finally, my doctor told me to give him liquids only between meals and not until three hours after eating. I cooked cereal and served with sugar and a little butter, and other foods likewise. He would beg so hard for a drink after eating that I would give in. Even if it was two hours after, he would vomit. If he would wait three hours, he would hold everything.

PRURITUS A SYMPTOM.

Trenton writes: What are the symptoms of pruritus? What is the cause? Is it contagious? What part of the body does it affect? Is there any cure for it?

REPLY.

Pruritus means itching. It is a symptom and not a disease. One has a great variety of locations from which to choose. One may itch anywhere, from stern to gudgeon.

Seven year itch is contagious. Most kinds are not.

When the word pruritus is used it is generally combined with some other word to designate its cause or location. We speak of diabetic pruritus, meaning the itch which is sometimes a symptom of diabetes; senile pruritus, that due to the dry skin of old age.

COLD SORES.

E. E. G. writes:

1. What is the cause of cold sores?
2. How can they be prevented?
3. What is a good treatment for them?

REPLY.

1. The usual cause is an infection such as common cold, or pneumonia.
2. By avoiding the cause.
3. Applying camphor ointment is generally satisfactory within limits. Nature cures.

HOW TO GET SLEEP.

N. A. H. writes: Formerly, every spring and fall, I had pains in my back. After an endless series of "cures," none of which cured, a physician gave it as his opinion that the mattress on my bed was too soft, the too deep curve causing a nightly stretch and strain on spinal nerves, muscles and bones. His recommendation was a simple board slat framework, slightly smaller in length and width than the mattress.

A carpenter made it for me at practically no cost. I placed it over bedspring and under mattress, making a firm, comfortable support for my back. One hundred per cent relief was immediate and permanent. I used it for several years, took it out a few months ago just to see what would happen, but have had no pains. Actually, I preferred the hard bed to the mushy feeling of a soft mattress.

REPLY.

Did you ever sleep in a hammock? Try it and find your argument multiplied.

NOT BOWLEG CAUSE.

Mrs. E. J. W. writes: Is it true that the old style three cornered diaper has a tendency to make children bowlegged?

REPLY.

No.

CONVENTIONS OF THE PAST

A Review of Political Party National Conclaves Since 1832.

In view of the approach of the two great national conventions in Chicago, The Tribune believes the activities at major party conventions of other years will be of interest to its readers. Yesterday a brief history of such gatherings up to 1844 was printed and today a similar history includes the conventions from 1848 to 1856. Beginning tomorrow excerpts from The Tribune's files on the conventions of 1860 and subsequent years will be printed in these columns from day to day.

The Democratic national convention in Baltimore, on May 26, 1848, organized the first national party committee. Lewis Cass of Michigan was chosen the party nominee for President on the fourth ballot, with William O. Butler of Kentucky as the vice presidential nominee.

Gen. Zachary Taylor, hero of the Mexican war, was chosen by the Whigs as their standard bearer at a Philadelphia convention on June 9. Millard Fillmore was his running mate.

June 6, 1852, in Baltimore, the Democrats nominated Franklin Pierce of New Hampshire on the forty-ninth ballot. His principal opponents were James Buchanan, later President, and Stephen A. Douglas, already a power in Illinois. The Democratic platform contained a firm assertion of state rights.

Pierce's opponent, chosen at Baltimore by the Whigs on June 19, was the military hero, Winfield Scott.

In 1856 the Republican party, heir in large measure to the voting elements that had followed Whig leadership in the past, gathered for the first time in national convention at Philadelphia on June 17 and picked John C. Fremont for the presidency.

The dying Whig organization, however, refused to pass on without a final gasp. In a convention at Baltimore on Sept. 17, 1856, it nominated Millard Fillmore for the presidency. It drew the allegiance of the American [Know Nothing] party, which was founded on bitter opposition to "foreigners and ultraists."

But the Democrats, on June 6 of the same year, had nominated James Buchanan over Franklin Pierce and Stephen A. Douglas at Cincinnati. John C. Breckinridge was Buchanan's running mate. The triumph of Buchanan in the election and his administration were preludes to the greater events of 1860 and 1861.

Every Man's University

Questions and answers prepared by members of the faculty of the University of Chicago outline what they consider a well educated person ought to know. Today's instructor, Arthur Pearson Scott, associate professor of history.

TODAY'S QUESTION:

Were the middle ages a period of darkness and a serious setback to civilization?

[This question will be repeated and answered in this space tomorrow.]

SATURDAY'S QUESTION:

What was the importance of the Roman empire for western civilization?

ANSWER:

The Roman empire brought within one great political unity all the peoples and civilization of the Mediterranean basin. The elements from the older orient, from the Greeks and from the Hebrews by way of Christianity, were all given a chance to spread and mingle under Roman government and Roman law. The ideal of one rule for the civilized world survived in the medieval empire and the Roman Catholic church. Many of the principles and even the details of Roman law reappear in the law of all the nations today. The combined oriental, Greek, Christian, and Roman civilization was impressed on formerly barbarian groups in western Europe, and its essentials survived into the middle ages to become part of the foundation of our modern life.

NOT A CITIZEN.

Chicago, May 1.—[Friend of the People.]—I was born in Austria-Hungary and came to the United States in 1913, at the age of four. My parents are not citizens. Would my coming to this country at that age make me a citizen?

C. C.

No, mere residence in the United States does not confer citizenship.

UNPAID ASSESSMENTS.

Chicago, May 2.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—I received a special assessment bill for the last year, with notice that if same is not paid within ten days they can sell the property. 1. Is this correct? 2. If sold, how long has the owner to redeem and is the cost considerable? 3. How much interest can they charge if same remains unpaid?

G. L.

1. Yes.
2. Two years.
3. The maximum is 12 per cent each six months. Within this limit the figure depends on the bidding at the tax sale.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

UNCLAIMED INHERITANCE.

Chicago, May 2.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—If, over fifty years ago, heirs to an estate in England were advertised for and no claim by the direct heir was made (1) is the share unclaimed divided between the other heirs or held in chancery? If so, how many years? 2. How can children of the [deceased] heir proceed to claim it?

L. A. C.

1. If there is a will the question whether the gifts would lapse or not would depend on the wording.
2. The first step would be to get in touch with the clerk of the court and ascertain the present status of the estate. We suggest that you write to the American consul there, giving him the names and dates.

THE BUYING POWER ARGUMENT.

Chicago, May 6.—A letter on government pay published in the Voice of the People on May 2 criticized a previous letter for suggesting that working people in Chicago who have had wage cuts write their congressmen asking that the salaries of federal employés be cut also. The argument is the old one about the country needing buying power to take up the products of the factories. The writer says, "How in the name of common sense can more buying result if federal employés are given a reduction?"

Fundamentally, what we need is the introduction of measures that will make conditions possible for people to go back to work creating goods and services. Work is the basis of all wealth. Not to cut federal employés simply means that a special privileged group will be able to go on buying with money taxed away from other people who, as a result, have to curtail their buying by just this amount. In other words, money is being taken away from people who produce wealth and furnish employment and given to others who do not. It is, of course, necessary to have some government employés, but when this expense increases out of proportion to taxpayers' incomes it imposes an unfair and stifling burden on them. People simply will not use their capital and initiative to give employment in a business enterprise when they see that they will not be able to capture a fair profit on account of high taxes or any other cause.

Due to conditions arising from the war, values are fundamentally changed. The income of industry is so reduced that salaries and wages have had to suffer large reductions, and capital has virtually ceased to earn. To put further tax burdens on the producers of our wealth so that nonproducers or overhead [government employés] can get a larger share of reduced national income is unthinkable and will not help to return prosperity.

SHERIDAN ROAD.

Chicago, May 2.—I want to express appreciation of your editorial of last Friday on Sheridan Road, which has attracted a great deal of attention and favorable comment by hundreds of residents in Evanston and north shore communities, and unanimously we support your suggestion that through traffic should be shifted to the roads to the west like McCormick boulevard and the Waukegan road.

There are four or five applications of large trucking companies hauling through freight now pending before the Illinois commerce commission which, to a greater or less extent, propose to route their freight trucks on Sheridan road; and bus companies also frequently make efforts to use this route. In the hearings of the truck companies before the Illinois commerce commission we presented petitions signed by owners of property representing more than four miles of frontage in Evanston alone, but these cases are still pending.

POLISH AGGRESSIONS DENIED.

Chicago, May 3.—Today THE TRIBUNE carried an alarming dispatch from Danzig of an alleged concentration of Polish troops at Danzig, tending to show Poland's aggressive intentions toward the neighboring German provinces. Dispatches of this kind have in recent years ceased to become news. The world has become accustomed to them. One side spreads the alarms as consistently as the other denies them. [Today an anti-Polish policy is the most popular platform in Germany.]

In due course the anti-Polish campaign began to produce results other than those expected by its originators. On March 17 the East Prussian diet listened to a statement of the oberpresident, Herr Siehr, who warned that the spreading of anti-Polish alarms has already resulted in a run on local banks and savings institutions, also in the withdrawal of credit facilities by local merchants. This warning, however, did not prevent the landrat of Elbing from requesting all local government authorities to promote excursions to Elbing where a manifestation was to take place against "the Poles whose greedy hand reaches for German soil."

Does Germany need or want additional security from Poland? Interviewed by a correspondent of the Tribune de Geneve, the Stahlheim leader, Herr Seldte, spoke at length of the Polish danger to East Prussia.

"We may therefore assume," the correspondent remarked, "that Germany is anxious to maintain the status quo in the east."

"No, of course not! Nothing of the kind," Mr. Seldte replied.

If, therefore, Germany is genuinely anxious about the integrity of her eastern provinces, why does she not accept a guarantee of security through a pact of nonaggression with Poland? It has been offered to her by Poland on more than one occasion.

16 YEARS AGO TODAY

MAY 9, 1916.

NEW YORK.—The Herald this morning prints the following from El Paso, Tex., it having been sent by W. A. Willis, one of the most reliable men on its staff: "The Mexican de facto government has thrown the gauntlet down to the United States. Gen. Alvaro Obregon, Mexican minister of war, and Juan N. Amador, subsecretary of foreign relations in Gen. Carranza's cabinet, it is reported, coolly told Maj. Gen. Frederick Funston this afternoon that the presence of the American punitive expedition in Mexico no longer could be tolerated and that if Brig. Gen. Pershing is not at once withdrawn his forces would be attacked by government troops."

WASHINGTON.—President Wilson dispatched another note to Berlin today, accepting Germany's declaration that submarine warfare on commerce will be conducted henceforth in conformity with international law. The President refuses to entertain, however, the German suggestion that to insure a permanent reform of German submarine warfare he must compel Great Britain to lift or greatly modify the starvation blockade.

LONDON.—Four more of the leaders in the Irish revolt have been sentenced to death by the Dublin court martial and executed, according to an official statement issued tonight. They were Cornelius Colbert, Edmund Kent, Michael Mallon, and J. J. Houston. This makes a total of twelve who suffered the extreme penalty. Nineteen others concerned in the insurrection were sentenced to death, but the sentences were commuted to various terms of penal servitude. On three others prison terms were imposed. Two were acquitted.

EUROPEAN WAR SUMMARY.—The liner Cymric, now a munitions carrier, was torpedoed in the Atlantic, but is making its way to an Irish port. Two other allied vessels were torpedoed by German submarines. Paris claims the French have stopped a terrific German attack on Verdun. Australasian troops have arrived at the front.

ROOSEVELT MEN CONCEDE BATTLE IN CONVENTION

Ritchie, Baker Forge to Front for Nomination.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., May 8.—[Special.]—There is now pretty general agreement among politicians that the California primary last Tuesday changed the whole aspect of the contest for the Democratic nomination for President. The result of that primary which gave the California delegation to Speaker Garner administered a severe setback to the candidacy of Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt of New York. This is conceded even by the Roosevelt partisans who, no longer are looking for the nomination of the governor on the first ballot. They still think he will be nominated, but only after a battle in the convention.

With Roosevelt slipping, other aspirants have forged to the fore, notably Gov. Albert C. Ritchie of Maryland and former Secretary of War Newton D. Baker of Ohio. Ritchie, who is a conservative, an advocate of a return to the doctrine of state rights and a consistent champion of repeal of prohibition, stands high with the Al Smith following east and west.

Baker Now a Conservative.

Mr. Baker, who entered public life as a liberal, has qualified in recent years as a conservative and now is regarded as a possible compromise nominee who would be entirely acceptable to the conservative wing of the party.

Although Roosevelt was beaten by Smith in the Massachusetts primary and by Garner in California, there hardly is a Democratic leader here who has any expectation of the nomination of either Smith or Garner.

The anti-Roosevelt leaders now are sure they have the nomination of the governor blocked. The Roosevelt partisans while now convinced they are up against a stiff fight in the convention, are counting on sufficient reinforcements from favorite sons states after the preliminary balloting to give the governor the necessary two-thirds vote for the nomination.

AKRON STARTS FOR WEST COAST WITH 81 ABOARD

BULLETIN.

Augusta, Ga., May 8.—(AP)—The Akron passed over Augusta at 8:15 eastern standard time tonight.

Lakehurst, N. J., May 8.—(AP)—The Akron, queen of the navy's lighter than air craft, glided through low rolling clouds along the Atlantic coast today en route to the west coast to join the Pacific fleet for maneuvers.

After leaving her home port at the naval air station here at 6 o'clock [E. S. T.] this morning with Lieut. Com. Charles E. Rosendahl at the controls, the huge ship rose to a height of about 1,600 feet and headed south.

C. E. ROSENDAHL.

2 Tiny Planes on Airship.

The Akron circled the station twice and took aboard two tiny airplanes in mid-air before setting her course.

Lieuts. Young and Harrigan piloted their diminutive spider ships to the proper position below the Akron, attached their planes to a trapeze like affair and were hoisted into the five plane "hangar" within the airship.

The weather map at the station showed good weather conditions along the proposed route.

Before leaving, Commander Rosendahl pronounced the ship in better condition than before the accident of Feb. 22, when one of her lower fins was bumped against the ground in view of a group of congressmen who were waiting to go aloft.

81 Aboard Craft.

The ship carried a crew of 64, 15 officers, and 2 naval officers as passengers. Among them was Commander Alger H. Dresel, scheduled to take command of the ship after its return to Lakehurst. Commander Rosendahl will go on sea duty in order to become eligible for promotion.

How long the airship will remain on the west coast was problematical, depending largely upon the amount of helium available at Sunnyvale, Cal.

There was a possibility the ship might be ordered to Hawaii.

Flying Forecast

Special flying route forecasts for the period from 9 p. m. May 8 to noon May 9 [central standard time]:

Chicago-Evansville and Cincinnati—Varying cloudiness, some likelihood of a few local showers or thunderstorms; mostly fresh to strong westerly winds.

Chicago-Detroit-Cleveland—Varying cloudiness, some likelihood of local showers or thunderstorms; mostly fresh to strong westerly winds.

Chicago-St. Louis—More or less cloudiness, probably some local showers or thunderstorms; moderate to locally strong winds, mostly westerly.

Chicago-Twin Cities—Mostly overcast, with occasional rain, possibly thunderstorms over extreme south; fresh to moderately strong winds mostly west to northwest.

Chicago-Omaha—More or less cloudiness, probably some local showers or thunderstorms, especially over east portion; moderate to locally strong winds, mostly west to northwest.

Chicago-Kansas City—More or less cloudiness, probably some local showers or thunderstorms; moderate to locally strong winds mostly west to northwest.

Route forecasts for 12 hours ending at noon:

Evansville-Atlanta — Cloudy to partly cloudy, gentle winds mostly west up to 1,000 feet and moderate to fresh westerly at 5,000 feet.

Cleveland-New York—Mostly cloudy, local showers and probably scattered thunderstorms; gentle variable winds near Cleveland and gentle to moderate east or southeast near New York up to 1,000 feet, and fresh westerly winds near Cleveland and moderate west northwest or west near New York at 5,000 feet.

2 SESSIONS WILL CLEAR UP G. O. P. CAMPAIGN LINES

BY PARKE BROWN.

Republican organization lines both in Cook county and in the state as a whole may be determined definitely during the next two days.

FRANK L. SMITH.

The county convention, which recessed on April 18, is due to meet again at 3 p. m. today in the ballroom of the Hotel Sherman. And tomorrow the new state central committee elected in the April 12 primary is to meet at Springfield for the purpose of organization.

The attitudes of most of the Cook county leaders toward the two gatherings are in strong contrast. They are willing to let Len Small, the governorship nominee, take over control of the state body, but they object seriously to his coming into Cook county and assuming control here as he is attempting to do.

Permit Candidate to Choose.

It has been the custom for years to permit the governorship nominee to name the chairman of the state committee, who ordinarily is the November campaign manager. Since the nominee is the man most vitally interested it has been conceded that he should be allowed to pick his own manager. And the same rule has been applied in the selection of the committee secretary and treasurer.

In this instance the present chairman, C. J. Doyle of Springfield, was not a candidate for reelection, and the way is clear for a new man. Various reports have come from the Small camp as to his choice in the matter. One of them is that he favors Franklin J. Stransky of Savanna. But the man who managed most of the Small primary campaign and is recognized as the man in charge of the committee meeting is Frank L. Smith of Dwight, and there is a strong belief in many quarters that he will be the new chairman.

Expect Little Opposition.

Local leaders have no objection to either of these men and, because of precedent, it is believed the Emmerson downstate forces will not oppose Small's wishes. In both instances there are a number of big shots who say they feel little interest in the November election.

But the Cook county men as a whole resent Small's efforts to force them to "sign up," which reached a climax last Friday when he telegraphically summoned the ward committeemen to come to his headquarters in the Hotel Morrison. They not only resented the downstater's intrusion, but also protested at the prospect that Small's plans would bring a former Republican mayor back into power in the committee.

Favor Another Recess.

It is said the Small and "old city hall" pressure has failed to line up a majority of the committee, but those opposed to the Small plan favor another recess of the convention today on grounds that credentials will not be issued for another week. In the meantime efforts toward an agreement among the anti-Small forces are under way. It is reported that Gov. L. L. Emmerson has been urged to come to Chicago today to seek to keep some of his committeemen out of the Small camp.

The "old city hall" candidate is Patrick Sheridan Smith, former city clerk. George F. Barrett is a strong candidate. The country town and Deneen members are for County Commissioner William Busse. Some of the Emmerson forces are said to favor a compromise upon Edward F. Moore, who supported Custer throughout his campaign.

YOUTH SHOT BY WATCHMAN.

Stanley Bryk, 22 years old, 3750 South Wood street, was shot and seriously wounded yesterday by a watchman while, it was alleged, he and several other youths were stealing lumber from a yard at 39th and Leavitt streets.

SIX ARRESTED IN RAID ON SYDNEY'S ANTI-RED "ARMY"

[Copyright: 1932: By the New York Times.]

SYDNEY, Australia, May 8.—A white hood on the Ku Klux Klan model was found by police today when they raided the headquarters of the New Guard, Sydney's anti-communist "army."

The raid followed an assault on John Garden, secretary of the Sydney Labor council, by eight men who called at his house at 2 o'clock this morning pretending to be police and then attacking him. Six alleged New Guardsmen have been arrested.

The police said that a Fascist body exists within the New Guard whose leaders are keeping silence except for a brief early denial that their organization was connected with the assault.

THREE CHILDREN KILLED BY AUTOS; ANOTHER IS DYING

Cars Strike Two at Play in Streets.

A 5 year old boy was killed early this morning and his two sisters and his father were injured when they were struck by an automobile as they stepped off the curb in 47th street to board a street car at Sacramento avenue. He was the third boy to die of automobile injuries since yesterday afternoon. A fourth boy was hurt.

The boy killed was Theodore Zukowski of 1908 West 51st stret. Those hurt were Anton Zukowski, 43; Lillian, 11, and Mildred, 13. They will recover. New City police arrested the auto driver, Anthony Ross, 29, of Justice Park, and his companion, John Pordoski, 28, of Summit. They said that Ross had been drinking.

Two Other Children Killed.

The two other boy victims were Teddy Swinetek, 8, of 1834 South Ashland avenue and Bernard Liersh, 3, of 1840 North Washtenaw avenue. Teddy was killed when playing ball in front of his home by the car of Eston Williamson, a Negro, of 1936 Maypole avenue. Bernard was injured on Saturday while playing in the street near his home by the auto of Stephen Servas, 1701 North Artesian avenue, and died yesterday.

Alex Kotkovet, 6 years old, of 8434 Gilbert court, was the boy hurt. He was struck by the car of John Ceynawa, 6535 South Richmond street, at Seeley avenue and 87th street. It was said he might die.

Aged Man Killed.

During the day Henry Hugel, 78 years old, of 4201 North Whipple street, was killed at Belmont and Kedzie avenues by the auto of Herbert Howard of Milwaukee. Howard was held.

These deaths increased the Cook county motor toll to 383 since Jan. 1.

Seven persons were injured, four of them seriously, in a collision at Five Points crossing, southwest of Waukegan, yesterday, when a tire on the automobile of Claude Allen of Kenosha burst and caused his car to careen into the line of opposing traffic. It struck a car driven by John J. Arado, 803 South Cicero avenue.

Allen's wife, Elizabeth, received internal injuries and his mother-in-law, Mrs. Marie Evers, sustained a broken leg. Mrs. Arado was also internally injured, as was Frederick W. Curtis, 7661 Sheridan road, a passenger in the Arado car. Allen, Arado, and Mrs. Curtis were cut and bruised. All of the victims were taken to St. Therese's hospital in Waukegan.

BETTY WERNER, SWEETHEART OF DURKIN, IS DEAD

Betty Werner, sweetheart of the notorious Marty Durkin, whose love turned to hatred when he married another woman, is dead. Records at the Oak Forest infirmary yesterday disclosed that she died on April 24 of tuberculosis and was buried at Mount Hope cemetery with a few relatives as mourners.

Betty risked her life to save Durkin when the police set a trap for them, but when he married Irma Sullivan, the daughter of a village blacksmith, she turned against him. She was a star witness for the state in Durkin's trial for the murder of Federal Agent Edward Shanahan. Durkin was convicted and is serving a 25 year term at Joliet. Betty later married Clyde Whalen, who divorced her. Jack Werner, father of her child, has disappeared.

After the notoriety of the trial Betty obtained employment in a south side clothing store, but lost it. She entered the infirmary last August under the name of Elizabeth Andrews. She was 27 years old.

FRED FOWLER, ASSESSOR OF HARVEY, DIES

Fred C. Fowler, 59 years old, assessor of Thornton township, died suddenly in his home at 15313 Marshfield avenue, Harvey, yesterday. His death was believed due to a heart attack.

Mr. Fowler was formerly commissioner of public property in Harvey. He had been employed for 26 years in the office of the clerk of the Superior court. He is survived by his widow, Julia, 59 years old, and three brothers, Edward, Burt, and George. Interment will be in Hazelwood cemetery Wednesday at 2:30 o'clock.

CHILE IS WARNED RED REVOLUTION NEARS ZERO HOUR

Governors Ordered to Get Troops Ready.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

VALPARAISO, Chile, May 8.—Chile, with Peru, figures as district No. 9 on the communistic map of South America, Premier Victor Robles declared in a circular sent today to all provincial governors warning them of Red activities and authorizing them to quell any disturbance with military force.

VICTOR A. ROBLES.

He stated that the government is in possession of documentary evidence that Moscow is taking a peculiar interest in Chile and that the soviets are of opinion that the workers' movement, especially in northern Chile, where foreign capital is involved, is ripe for a major social revolution.

Chilean Reds Are Listed.

Premier Robles said in his circular that one of the Russian documents listed the names of all Chileans who are being paid through Moscow and added that he is giving secret orders to the departmental authorities to detain these men. Another document, he said, indicated that May is a danger month inasmuch as different attempts will then be made to seize power in the name of the workers. The circular continued:

"The government is satisfied as to the authenticity of the documents and solemnly warns you to be on your guard. The communists have penetrated practically every workers' organization in this country. You are especially warned to watch the activities of the persons listed, who are known to be in receipt of regular sums of foreign money.

Strikes Have Red Origin.

"Recently there have been a large number of strikes in the mining industry, especially in those parts where foreign capital is concerned. In the first place the movement appears to have an economic origin, but it invariably happens that it degenerates into a political conflict with the men demanding the deposition of the government and communistic changes in the national constitution.

"To help you carry out these instructions you are hereby authorized to demand three days' notice for the calling of any meeting within closed doors and to arrest any trade union leader calling a strike unless he has notified you a week in advance of the existence of an economic dispute in which his trade is involved and after such dispute has been submitted to an arbitration board.

"In the past many of these union leaders have been in the habit of promoting a strike which resulted in bloodshed and afterward running away with the wages they have received from abroad. This must not happen in the future. They must be held responsible under martial law for any disorder they create."

Police Sergt. Nielson Dies of Infection from Wound

Police Sergeant Henry Nielson, 48 yeass old, 3510 Crandon avenue, died in his home yesterday of an infection that developed from a gunshot wound he accidentally received when he was cleaning his service revolver in his home on March 20. Sergt. Nielson had been a member of the police department for 19 years and at the time of his death was an acting lieutenant at the East Side station. Surviving him are his widow, Anna, and three children, Henry, Arthur, and George. Funeral services will be held Wednesday in the chapel at 7206 Stony Island avenue. Burial will be in Holy Sepulchre cemetery.

Dr. Avard L. Bishop, Yale Professor, Is Dead at 57

New Haven, Conn., May 8.—(AP)—Dr. Avard Longley Bishop, 57, professor of business administration at Yale since 1918, died today at his home after a heart attack. He was a native of Nova Scotia.

UTILITY CHIEF DIES

ROBERT M. FEUSTEL.

Fort Wayne, Ind., May 8.—[Special.]—Robert M. Feustel, 47, president of the Midland United company, Insull utilities corporation operating in Indiana and Ohio, died at his home here today following a short illness.

Mr. Feustel was born in Fort Wayne and was graduated from Purdue university in 1905. From 1907 to 1915 he was engineer for the Wisconsin railroad commission and Illinois utilities commission, successively. He organized his own business as a consulting engineer in 1915 and became nationally known as a valuation and rate expert for public utilities.

In 1929 Mr. Feustel was elected executive vice president of the Midland United company and succeeded Samuel Insull Jr. as its president last December. He was vice chairman of the Northern Indiana Public Service company, president of the Public Service Company of Indiana, and a director of the Chicago Federal Reserve bank.

Mrs. Esther Griffith Feustel, the widow, and two children survive.

E. H. KESSBERGER DEAD; FUNERAL SERVICES TODAY

Funeral services for Edward H. Kessberger, vice president of Stewart, Keator, Kessberger & Lederer, insurance brokers, who died Saturday evening, will be held tomorrow morning in the chapel at 2701 North Clark street. Burial will be in Springfield, Ill.

Mr. Kessberger was 58 years old and lived at 625 Addison street. He was born in Springfield and had been in the insurance business here and in Springfield for more than 30 years. He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Louisa N. Kessberger and three brothers, August W., and William. F., of Springfield, and George P. Kessberger of Detroit. He was a member of many Masonic societies and the Chicago Board of Underwriters.

IAN KEITH WILL WED FERN ANDRA, FILM ACTRESS

San Francisco, Cal., May 8.—(AP)—Though their marriage will have to wait a year, until an interlocutory Los Angeles divorce decree becomes final, Ian Keith, appearing in a stage play here, and Fern Andra, actress, announced their engagement today.

Keith said he received word Friday the interlocutory decree divorcing him from Ethel Clayton, stage and screen actress, had been sustained by the courts.

"We'll have to wait a year before we can marry," said Miss Andra, "but that will give us plenty of time to learn all about each other."

Miss Andra was born in Watseka, Ill. She went to Europe as a child and gained fame as an actress. Her first husband, Baron von Welchs, a nephew of the former Empress Zita of Austria, was killed in the world war. Later she married Kurt Prenzel, former middleweight boxing champion of Germany. They were divorced.

Keith's first wife was Blanche Yurka, an actress. They were divorced and his marriage to Miss Clayton followed.

INDIANA POLICE SHOOT ESCAPED JOLIET CONVICT

Indianapolis, Ind., May 8.—(AP)—George Lane, convict escaped from Joliet, Ill., penitentiary, was shot and perhaps fatally wounded here tonight when he attempted to flee from a police trap in his rooming house. He was shot in the back by Lieut. Daniel Cummings as he dashed for a doorway not guarded by officers. Police said Lane escaped from the stone quarry at the penitentiary April 5, stole an automobile and went to Chicago. Officers located his wife and four children here and notified Joliet authorities, who sent several warnings that Lane was a desperate character, free handed with firearms, and that extensive precautions should be taken in attempting to capture him.

At City hospital it was said Lane might not survive the night.

The rooming house owner said Mrs. Lane and the children were in the apartment a moment before the police arrived. No sign of them was found.

Officers recovered an automobile they said was stolen in Springfield, Ill.

ELLEN C. SEMPLE, SCIENTIST, DEAD IN FLORIDA AT 69

West Palm Beach, Fla., May 8.—(AP)—Dr. Ellen Churchill Semple, 69, eminent woman scientist and world traveler, died at her winter residence here today.

Dr. Semple had been ill for some time and came here last October. She was on a special leave of absence from Clark university of Worcester, Mass., where she held a professorship of anthropogeography.

Born in Louisville, Ky.

Worcester, Mass., May 8.—(AP)—Ellen Churchill Semple, who died today at West Palm Beach, Fla., was born in 1863 in Louisville, Ky., the daughter of Alexander Bonner Semple and Emerine [Price] Semple. In 1882, at the age of 19, she was graduated from Vassar with the degree of bachelor of arts. After graduate work in history and extensive travels in Europe she was granted the master of arts degree from Vassar in 1891.

GIRL FLASHES 'UNLOADED' GUN; YOUTH WOUNDED

Basil Kowall, 24 years old, 3741 North Crawford avenue, took Miss Charlotte Kay, 21 years old, 5735 North Kenneth avenue, to visit his cousin, Robert Little, at 204 North Kenneth avenue yesterday afternoon.

They were hospitably received. Robert set the radio going and both youths danced with Charlotte while Mrs. Rose Little, the host's mother, was preparing dinner.

At the end of one of the dances Charlotte walked over to a mantel, picked up a pistol and whirled it over her head with one finger. She thought it wasn't loaded, but it was. When it discharged Basil Kowall was struck in the right hip. He was taken to the Garfield Park hospital and Charlotte and Robert went to the Fillmore street police station to explain it was an accident.

Estranged Husband Shoots Wife 4 Times; She May Die

Mrs. Helen Witkowski, 23 years old, was sitting alone last night in the home of her mother, Mrs. Victoria Dradzeyk, at 8712 Exchange avenue, when she was suddenly confronted by her husband, James, 24, of 3320 East 83th street, a baker, from whom she has been separated for 18 months. He drew a revolver, announcing that "no one else will get you," and fired four times. All shots took effect. At the South Chicago hospital it was found that the estranged wife had been struck in the abdomen, and once each in the arm and leg. She may die. Witkowski was seized half an hour later at his home.

BEG YOUR PARDON

In yesterday's TRIBUNE it was incorrectly stated that Mrs. Anna Sankstone, killed in an automobile accident, was 77 years old. Relatives say she was 55 years old.

All Outdoors Appeal Styled in New Clothes

Summer Dresses Inspire Prayers for Heat.

BY RHEA SEEGER.

MAY is the month we move outdoors. Every one suddenly develops a passion for gardens, flowers, seeds, rakes and spades or any sort of an excuse to slam the house doors shut and luxuriate in sunshine and warm weather.

Winter woolens finish their days of service with a few last stifling hours, even thin sheer wools that we gladly donned in early cool springtime begin to irritate, so the rush starts for the shops where frocks and suits of cotton, linen and mesh are displayed.

For, even though you take your gardening very seriously, and plant your potatoes in the full of the moon and count the buds on your bean shoots and discuss the weather with all kindred souls wherever and whenever you find such an audience hanging over the garden gate, the greatest thrill for the feminine garden growers inside or outside the garden fence are the new clothes especially designed for these diggers in the dirt.

You can plant your herb garden with your personality completely obscured with a peasant-like smock . . . with gloves or cotton mits at least three sizes too large, your head also concealed under the spreading brim of a floppy straw hat. Or enthusiastically go in for freedom with workmanlike overalls or garden pajamas, use the same huge hat and gloves and dig for everything, vegetables, herbs, flowers, as well as an occasional worm.

After all this commendable excavating ardor cools, the next excuse that keeps you out-of-doors is the pursuit of such heated pleasures and pastimes as tennis and golf and all the fascinating activities that keep you thin and slim. And without any games to interest you, you stay outside just to loaf and soak up the sun.

You will not dread a hot and sultry summer this year, you'll probably pray for plenty of heat after you have seen the new summer clothes. We are going to look, on the whole, as open and airy and spongy as mesh wash rags this summer, for practically everything in the way of fabric is nothing more or less than carelessly woven holes.

It makes you gasp to see some of the weaves, such frank and even loose abandon as to stitches and mesh are a bit startling to say the mildest, but after you are sold on this delightfully cool medium for freshness, your admiration grows by leaps and bounds and it isn't long until your entire wardrobe is made of mesh.

You may have thought that clothes are priced most satisfyingly low, but the utterly unbelievable small sums that you will spend for these mesh dresses will stun you. You can have from three to four frocks this summer for the price that you squandered a couple of years ago for just one! You can send them to the tubs as easily and unworriedly as you would a towel or two, no starch, and in many instances very little pressing is needed.

You can blaze with color, or stay with white and pastel shades. You will find firm, smooth meshes, or nubby bumpy patterns. You will see cotton lace effects and a material that resembles a woven chenille and some that are corded. One good looking outfit, a dress with a short flannel coat uses a blue and white inch-square check mesh for the short sleeved frock . . . the coat of blue flannel is fitted snugly with the new eight button [four on each side] closing. This can be had for a most trifling sum and in a wide variety of color combinations. Another dress that is very new is one of powder blue cotton lace that looks exactly like the patterns in Irish lace. It has short puffed sleeves and the flattering surplice closings.

The Black Bolero

This bolero coatee is black with edgings of yellow and light green. Touches of yellow are also found in the buttons and sleeve finish of the black marocain dress, while the black straw hat is trimmed with yellow and green peau-d'ange ribbon.

Polly Hart to Be Married at Garden Altar

Selects Attendants for June Wedding.

BY JUDITH CASS.

MISS POLLY HART, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. Stillson Hart of Barrington, is deep in plans for her wedding to Harold Byron Smith, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harold C. Smith of Lake Forest. The wedding is to be on Saturday, June 25, and the ceremony will be the picturesque affair that a summer nuptial service should be. The setting will be the lovely gardens of the Harts' estate in Barrington, and fourteen attendants will precede the bride and groom in the procession to the floral altar.

Details of the ceremony and the reception to follow have not been decided on as yet, but the list of Miss Hart's attendants is complete. Miss Betty Hart will, of course, be her sister's maid of honor. The girls Miss Hart has asked to be her bridesmaids include her sister-in-law-to-be, Miss Betty and Miss Anne Smith; Miss Isabel Gordon, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank S. Gordon; Miss Caroline McNair, daughter of Frank McNair; Miss Ruth Seely of Montreal, who was Miss Hart's roommate at Les Fougeres school in Switzerland, and Miss Mary Elizabeth Johnson of New York, a classmate of Miss Hart at Miss Porter's school at Farmington. Miss Gordon and Miss McNair were debutantes with Miss Hart last winter and all three girls assisted at each other's coming out parties.

Miss Hart and her fiancé and Miss Anne and Miss Betty Smith were week-end guests of the Solomon A. Smiths in Lake Forest. Mr. and Mrs. Smith gave a large buffet luncheon yesterday at Shore Acres for Miss Barbara Neff and Solomon B. Smith, who are to be married next Saturday at St. Chrysostom's, and for Mr. and Mrs. George S. Chappell Jr. [Caroline Smith], who were married several weeks ago.

Junior League to Elect Today.

We'll know who's to guide the destinies of the Junior league during the next two years after the annual meeting to be held this morning at 10:30 o'clock at the Petit Gourmet. Luncheon will be served after the business session. The capable Miss Dorothy Schmidt has been president for the last two years.

Lake Forest board members of Druce Lake camp are boosting the sale at the famous private gardens of Mrs. H. S. Hicks near Rockford, because all proceeds from the sales will benefit the camp. Spring in Rockford, which is just a two hour drive from Lake Forest, is about 10 days earlier than on the north shore, so gardeners bent on replenishing their plots like the idea of a picnic lunch, a drive in the country, and a shopping tour through the Hicks gardens.

The Lake Forest board of the camp for undernourished children includes Mr. and Mrs. George W. Blossom, Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Templeton, Miss Ellen Holt, Miss Elizabeth Webster, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas E. Wells, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph E. Milman, Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence W. Scudder, Mr. and Mrs. David Dangler, and Mr. and Mrs. Frank E. Harkness.

Mrs. Marcel Levier of Corsica is to arrive in the city tomorrow from Silver City, N. M., where she has been visiting her daughter, Mrs. Hugh Hodge [Gladys Smith]. Mrs. Levier will spend only the day in Chicago visiting Mrs. Philip Maher and Mr. and Mrs. Charles S. Dewey. She will leave that night for New York to visit her other daughter, Mrs. Albert B. Dewey Jr. [Gwendoline Smith] and Mr. Dewey in the apartment they have taken at 1100 Park avenue.

Summer Plans and Travel Notes.

Dr. and Mrs. Paul B. Magnuson have closed their apartment at 219 Lake Shore drive and have moved out to their farm on the Barrington turnpike near Dundee for the summer. Mrs. Magnuson's mother, Mrs. Leverett Thompson of Lake Forest, has arrived at home from abroad and has been at the Ambassador East temporarily.

Mrs. Kersey Coates Reed will return the end of this week from a visit with her daughter, Mary, and her son, John, who are at schools in the east.

The Gratiot Washburnes have left to spend the summer and early fall at Hotfoot, the ranch they purchased recently at Duncan, Wyo.

Mr. and Mrs. Champ Carry have returned from a motor trip to Georgia and to Maryland, where they attended the Hunt Cup race.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank J. Loesch, who are in Washington, will return to Chicago before they leave on June 1, with Mrs. Loesch's mother, Mrs. Stephen G. Browning, to spend the summer at Cooperstown, N. Y.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Edward Brown of 2450 Lake View avenue will not occupy their Lake Forest house this summer, but Mrs. Brown, with their debutante daughter, Betty, and their two-year old son, will spend part of the warm weather months with her mother, Mrs. William Deshler, at Long Island. Mr. Brown will join his wife and children for whatever time he can spare from his office. The family will not leave the Lake View avenue residence, however, until after the national conventions have been held.

Francise Clow to Return Today.

Miss Francise Clow, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William E. Clow Jr. of Lake Forest, has been visiting her aunt, Miss Jessie Mann of Westbury, L. I., since her arrival in New York on Tuesday from a year's study of music and dancing in Europe, and is expected to return to Lake Forest today.

Mrs. Howard F. Gillette of 1301 Astor street has gone east to superintend the spring gardening at the Gillettes' summer place at Biddeford Pool, Me.

Mrs. Rensselaer W. Cox of 1539 Astor street has returned from a two

Shooting Scene Famous French Literary Sale

Doumer Tragedy at Famed Book Event.

BY FANNY BUTCHER.

THE tragic assassination of the president of France took place in a scene which is familiar to all literary Paris. Every year the Association Ecrivans Combattants de 1914 a 1918 [combatant writers of the world war] holds a book sale for the benefit of the dependents of writers who were killed during the war and writers who were injured in the service to their country. It is an occasion unlike anything that we have in America, for it is participated in by every important writer in France.

CLAUDE FARRERE.

We have occasional book autographings by single authors for charity [or for their own glory and gain], but we have no gathering of all of the great like the charity book sale in Paris. It is held in the beautiful Solomon Rothschild house [the Rothschild Foundation now]. The flower of French society and the intelligentsia are present. Tickets are difficult enough to get to insure vast eager throngs. Tea is served in the marvelous old garden at the back of the house.

The great salons on the first floor [there were five in use when I was there] are lined with tables on which are piled books sometimes as high as the eyes of the men and women who stand behind them. Those men and women are the literary elite of France. Every writer who can possibly be present is there, offering his or her books for sale to the public and, when they are purchased, inscribing them not alone with the author's signature but with the purchaser's name and [if requested] a sentiment.

There is no price set upon the books thus sold, and the purchaser gives whatever his heart and his conscience demands. Many of the books are made extremely valuable by their inscriptions. I saw no one offer less than a one hundred franc note for a book [$4] and many gave large sums for single volumes from their favorite authors.

The pile of books in front of Andre Maurois was replenished twice while I made the rounds of the tables and went back to say good-by to him and that I hoped to see him in America soon. Colette's table was a maelstrom of smartly dressed women and sophisticated men who were clamoring for her autograph and one of her bon mots. I had called on her the late afternoon before and we had got to be very friendly. When she signed a book for me she winked as she autographed it to me as "an old confrère." George Duhamel was rushingly busy autographing.

Almost every other name I had ever heard in modern French literature was there—and a good many that I had never encountered. But a person who intrigued me vastly by the mere picture which he made was Claude Farrere. He has a massive façade. He looks more like the Greek Moses than any one I have ever seen. He is the author, among other things, of brilliant thrillers, a few of which have appeared in America in translation.

Occasionally something happens of no importance whatever at the time but which you remember always and which by some track of fate comes later [years sometimes] to mean something quite different. Such a strange thing happened that afternoon while we were standing before the table at which Claude Farrere was autographing copies of his books.

He is an extremely popular writer with the French, and books were melting from the pile before him like a lily white skin before a sun lamp. He was laughing at the requests of the purchasers which were oftener for a book called "L'homme qui Assassina" than for any other of his works, and as the perspiration poured down his apostolic beard he smilingly observed to the audience surrounding him, who received it with appreciative laughter, "The crowd will assassinate me."

I haven't any idea why those words took root in my mind. They weren't any more than the facile turn of a phrase, and they certainly were not spoken with any prophetic meaning. But there they have been for almost three years, waiting, apparently, to pop up when I read the news story of the assassination of President Doumer and of the wounding of Claude Farrere.

Obedience Is Foretaste of Bliss to Elders

BY GLADYS HUNTINGTON BEVANS.

Question: "We have four children between 4 and 11. Sometimes they are so cherubic that we feel we have a heaven on earth, and again we seem to have a monopoly in a little corner of the fiery regions!

"Will you please send me the booklet 'How to Gain Obedience?'"

Answer: "Yes," might seem to be all the answer this question and human letter needs, but I am going to use this occasion to explain a little about the two kinds of booklets we send to our readers.

Where the subject is one that would require treatment of full book length, we send references for brief reading or books. As, for example, the "Child Management" or "Sex Education for All Ages," which are two big subjects.

But where we want to give advice on one aspect of behavior I have written booklets, dealing directly with the remedy, instead of giving reading suggestions. Among these are "Obedience," "Stubbornness," "Shyness," "Orderliness," and "Make Patience Your Handmaiden."

Recently there have been many requests for our booklets, written on postcards, with no provision for return mailing. Also, a number of letters contain no return envelope or stamp. All our material that is designed to be helpful to mothers is sent free, but only when a stamped self-addressed envelope is enclosed with request. If you have not received any literature you asked for it may be due to this oversight.

Bishop W. T. Sumner Arrives in City for Church Club Meeting

Bishop Walter T. Sumner, well known to thousands of Chicagoans, arrived here from Portland, Ore., yesterday to attend the forty-second annual dinner and meeting of the Church club of Chicago which is to be held tonight in the Hotel Sherman. He is the Episcopal bishop of Oregon.

Bishop Sumner left Chicago in 1915 after an active career here as a religious, civic and political leader. He served on the Chicago board of education for six years, and was a member of numerous civic organizations. For many years he was dean of the Cathedral of SS. Peter and Paul.

Another bishop from distant parts will also speak at the Church club meeting. He is Bishop Peter Trimble Rowe, known as the flying bishop of Alaska because of his use of planes in traversing the arctic territory. Bishop George Craig Stewart of Chicago will preside.

'Devil Passes' Good Comedy with Six Stars

"THE DEVIL PASSES."

A comedy by Benn W. Levy, given at the Selwyn theater May 8, 1932, with six players featured, under the management of Arch Selwyn.

THE CAST.

D. C. Magnus.....Arthur Byron
Paul Robinson.....Diana Wynyard
Dorothy Lister.....Mary Nash
Cosmo Penny.....Eric Blore
Louis Kisch.....J. Malcom Dunn
Beatrice Messiter.....Cecilia Loftus
Rev. Herbert Messiter...Robert Loraine
Ellen.....Gwen Day Burroughs
Rev. Nicholas Lucy.....Basil Rathbone

BY CHARLES COLLINS.

The play that came to the Selwyn theater last night contains as many stars as the cinema version of "Grand Hotel"—an even half dozen of luminous personalities. It is not, however, a revived pseudo-classic, like the typical "all star" affair, but an up to date hit, fresh from Broadway and a decidedly unusual example of contemporary dramatic authorship.

"The Devil Passes," in fact, is a work of such distinction, both in its writing and its acting, that it may serve as compensation for the curtailment of the Theater Guild's program for its Chicago subscribers. If you have become disconsolate over the Guild's failure to complete its schedule, this production by Arch Selwyn, who is merely a commercial impresario, should bring you a message of good cheer. It is, quite definitely, a superior article in the playgoing catalog.

This suave, well educated comedy, written with casual literary charm, has a moral purpose, but one does not need to shrink from it on that account, in spite of the current superstition that ethics have no place in theatrical entertainment. Without preaching to you, or giving you unwelcome instruction upon the true value of the wages of sin, "The Devil Passes" introduces you to his Satanic Majesty, pleasantly disguised as an English curate; and seeks to prove that the Old Boy himself is not an atheist. Indeed, he exists and weaves his temptations for the sole purpose of demonstrating the existence of God and the glory of virtue.

Of all the plays about the devil that have been written since Marlowe's "Dr. Faustus," this is the most subtle. Its theme is a bit of finespun theology, handled deftly and molded into the standard form of English week-end party comedy. It tells an utterly fantastic story, in terms of easygoing realism, and it skillfully avoids allegorical patterns and platitudinous preachments.

Its characters are convincing portraits of a group of country house Britons, calling themselves "realists" and "cultured blackguards." Even the Young Nick of the fable is a plausible figure as he practices diabolism for the greater glory of the Lord.

All of which may sound as if "The Devil Passes" is a decidedly high brow piece of work. That is true, and yet its manner is not pretentious. In addition, its quiet, chatty scenes develop into incidents of theatrical power.

Comment on the fine interpretation of this strange and charming play involves a roll call of its galaxy of stars. They are Arthur Byron, brisk veteran of many comedies of manners; the vivid Mary Nash, cast as a cynical actress; Cecilia Loftus, once the genius of mimicry, now an admirable actress of quaint matrons; Robert Lorain, in a character study of smoldering power; Diana Wynyard, a cool and lovely heroine from London, and Basil Rathbone, perhaps the most famous of the list because of his recent years in the films. To round out the cast to playgoing enthusiasm, characters, Eric Blore and J. Malcom Dunn are men of mettle in the gifted assembly.

Here you have a cast that can be called the most brilliant of the playgoing season; and a performance that is admirable at every point. "The Devil Passes" stands, therefore, as a

'Tis with our judgments as our watches, none
Go just alike, yet each believes his own.—Pope.

By Mae Tinée.

Good morning!

Exciting—to win in the "Devil's Lottery!"—but not such a good thing for the peace of mind if one is to believe all one sees and hears in this picture.

The "Devil's Lottery" refers to the Calcutta Sweepstakes, in which chance distribution of large sums of money often causes fortunes to descend in strange places. The story unreeling at the Palace bespeaks your interest re several people who have drawn winning tickets and whose lives are greatly changed thereby.

Evelyn Beresford, tragic, declassé member of the English aristocracy, is a winner. Stephen Alden, an Oxford university student, draws a lucky number. Mrs. Mary Ann Meech, a little Cockney matron with a strapping pugilist son, wins another. And news that Lady Luck has smiled on him speeds to partially paralyzed Capt. Geoffrey Maitland, who, since the war, has been compelled to remain in a government hospital.

Lord Litchfield, newspaper publisher and owner of the triumphant racer, King Midas, finds himself wondering what effect their suddenly acquired riches will have upon these people from such different walks of life. As a sort of sociological experiment he invites the recipients of the crazy largess to his country home for the week-end.

Here transpire events, sad, tragic, comic. . . .

Somehow the story wasn't convincing to me. The most unbelievable incident is the almost immediate attraction Evelyn Beresford feels toward the Oxford student who arrives with his fiancée. I lay my incredulity here to Alexander Kirkland's colorless personality. Not he the man to appeal strongly to the sad and lovely sophisticate who once was known as Lady Eve!

. . . And poor Maitland, pathetically portrayed by Frank Morgan, somehow didn't seem a real person. His lines, I know, had a lot to do with my limp reactions toward him.

Elissa Landi's beautifully sustained performance and the work of Beryl Mercer were, I thought, the high lights of the production. Paul Cavanagh plays a slimy individual slimily, and Herbert Mundin provides excellent comedy as Trowbridge, a valet.

The picture has been thoughtfully staged and charmingly photographed, and will undoubtedly hold your interest. I suspect it of having been intended as anti-sweepstakes propaganda —and the answer to that is—where can one buy a ticket?

OUR SECRET AMBITION

THE WHISPERER

By ROY VICKERS

SYNOPSIS.

The "Whisperer" crimes have held London terrorized for month. Numerous wealthy persons have been kidnaped and held for ransom. The ransom victim is sent a small wireless receiving set, by means of which the Whisperer speaks, using his own short wave, and gives directions for delivering the ransom demanded. Police dare not interfere, because death results for the captive if instructions are not carried out.

Roland Blatch joins the Whisperer's band in order to try to recover jewels he was forced to steal from his employer, Sir Henry Glaseborough, M. P., a leading philanthropist, in order to insure the safe return of his fiancée, Joyce Merrow, who was kidnaped by the bandit. Roland carries out the tasks assigned to him by the bandit and is involved in the killing of an unransomed victim, although the Whisperer has remained hidden from his view. Roland trails him, however, to his hideout and makes the startling discovery that the arch criminal is Sir Henry. The Whisperer takes Roland captive.

INSTALLMENT XXV.

A LOVER'S RENUNCIATION.

The glow of flames came fitfully through the smoke. Roland's eyes were smarting and now and again he coughed, but he could still breathe easily, for the slight draught was concentrating at the other end of the room.

In half an hour the smoke was perceptibly less. Then for the first time he noticed a muffled crackling and now and again a dull roar.

Then the explanation dawned on him. His prison was on fire—but it was burning on the outside.

"I shan't be burnt. I shall be roasted."

The room was becoming very hot—and it was far hotter at the sideboard end.

The electric plant had been destroyed. Roland ran through the thick smoke, grabbed a cluster of grapes, and ran back. The Whisperer had done it thoroughly—they were good grapes, and he ate greedily.

The heat meantime was steadily growing. And it was the greatest near the sideboard. Quite suddenly that simple fact gave birth to an idea.

The next moment, with the strength of a desperate man face to face with death, he was running down the room carrying the big armchair. He made for the hottest part of the wall and hurled the armchair with all his weight behind it.

The air crashed through the half burnt paneling and a sheet of flame roared into the room and beat him back.

But there was a gap in the wall—and through the smoke and flames he could see the last of the sunset.

A deep breath—and a moment later he had dived through the gap and landed head first, scorched and blackened—amongst a tangle of singed weeds.

He scrambled away and looked about him. His prison, burning hard now that an air vent had been made, was a long bungalow hut set in a cup-like hollow. A high, grassy bank, crescent shaped, shielded it from observation on three sides, while on the fourth side was a wood.

A mile or more ahead he saw the lights of houses and made towards them. He stumbled through marshland—which told him that he was between London and the east coast. He struck a road, just as a car approached.

He stepped into the road and held up his hand.

The motorist looked at Roland with stern disapproval, being obviously sorry he had stopped.

"I'm only going as far as Tilbury—you can get in if you like," he said.

"Awfully decent of you!" said Roland. "I've just burnt out my garage—got in a mess trying to save it."

The motorist said nothing because he did not believe that yarn, but Roland did not care. Arrived at Tilbury he thanked him profoundly and then sought a riverside hotel.

He decided to vary the garage story, so told the manager it was his car that had caught fire on the road. He would pay for a room, but he only wanted a whisky and soda at once and a bath to follow, after which he would have a cold supper.

The hot water soothed his nerves and filled him with exhilaration. The Whisperer had done his worst—and the Whisperer had failed.

He was half way through his supper when Roland quite suddenly faced the facts of his position. True, he had secured a personal triumph over the Whisperer. But that, in the end, was all. For the rest, he had failed.

He could not again hope to get near the Whisperer. His self-imposed mission was at an end. And the Whisperer, in spite of losing one of his depots and a lot of his reputation, was as free as ever to continue.

"But I at least know that Glassy is the Whisperer. I'll tell the police that—and let them find the proof themselves."

The police! That, of course, was what it would mean. As soon as he heard of the escape the Whisperer would lay evidence that Roland Blatch was the actual murderer of Lady Whiddon. And without the Whisperer's protection Roland knew that Scotland Yard would soon be able to hound him down. It would be more dignified to give himself up and boldly confess his share in the Whiddon affair.

Hard on the heels of this thought came another. He would see Joyce. Though but a few days had passed since they had decided to get married in September, how life had changed in these few days.

In some way that he could not guess Joyce had connected herself with the pursuit of the Whisperer. There was that night when he had seen her leave Glassy's flat—the Whisperer's flat, if she but knew it—in the company of a Scotland Yard man.

Slowly there formed in his mind the final determination to see her alone once more before he gave himself up to the police. It would do her no harm.

It was a quarter to ten and he knew she rarely went to bed before eleven. He paid his bill and hired a car from the hotel.

At five minutes to eleven he was paying off the car outside the block of flats. Nervousness seized him now. Aileen Standish, who shared the flat with Joyce, would certainly be in. She might insist on calling the police before he and Joyce could have a word together.

He had to ring up the porter—a maddening delay. The stairs seemed interminable. At last he tackled the knocker of Joyce's flat.

The door was opened so quickly that she must have been in the hall.

"Yes? . . . Who are you?"

She spoke as if to a stranger, but it was not this that unnerved him. There was that in her eyes that robbed him of speech. As he did not answer she looked again, then recognized him through the fading makeup.

"Roland! O——"

He was not certain whether she had fainted. He carried her over the threshold.

In the hall was the man with whom Joyce had come out of Glassy's.

"Roland! Roly! I had given you up. When you didn't speak again on the wireless we thought you had killed yourself. . . . The papers said you must be dead."

"It's all right, darling. I'm alive and kicking as hard as ever. Joyce, dearest; it's all right, really!"

It wasn't all right, of course. He turned to the man.

"Good evening; you are a detective, I believe!"

"Larpent, chief inspector," returned the other promptly. "I am in charge of the investigations into the Whisperer crimes, Mr. Blatch. You and I had a conversation by wireless last night." He added: "I see you managed to pull it off yourself in the end."

"Fused the electric gadgets and burnt the place down!" jerked Roland and, not noticing the detective's gesture of profound approval, hurried on:

"Will you please try to believe, Mr. Larpent, that I intended to give myself up tonight—after I had had a last word with Miss Merrow? Will you allow us five minutes—alone?"

"Of course I will!" replied Larpent. "I'll have a smoke here on the landing until you're ready."

The next moment he was in the sitting room with Joyce.

"Darling—perhaps you know what I've come to say. We—we aren't engaged any longer——"

"Yes, we are, Roland."

"No. Listen. I had the mad idea I could catch the Whisperer by joining his gang."

"I know. As if that could make any difference to me! Roly!"

She lifted her arms, but he took her by both hands.

"God forgive me, I can't!" You must hear me. It's all over—absolutely! I've come to say good-by, Joyce, you don't know what's happened—and you must know."

He compelled her to listen while he told her that he had been tricked into murdering Lady Whiddon.

Before she could say anything Chief Inspector Larpent walked in.

"The five minutes isn't quite up, but I've just thought of something that may affect what you want to say to the lady." Roland was vaguely aware that he spoke more like an elderly relation than a detective. "It's just this—I should have thought myself that there's no particular hurry to give yourself up. Why don't you wait until we catch you?"

Wife Envies Bread Winner Her Daily Job

BY DORIS BLAKE.

"Louise X." writes of a situation in a household which brings up the subject of envy on the part of certain wives toward the professional or business sister. "Louise's" sister is a widow with three children, aged 11, 13, and 15, all practically dependent on "Louise"! She is the father, business man, earner of the household. The widowed sister keeps up the house with the help of a cleaning woman and washwoman who comes in twice a week.

"My sister," Louise tells, "is appreciative about the money help. She is a good housekeeper, good cook, and all that. But I get so weary of hearing about what a cinch my life it compared to hers that some days I have hard work keeping my temper."

"Where do wives get the idea that the life of a woman in a business man's shoes is a cinch compared to theirs? I claim my job is more exacting, more nerve racking, less natural than my sister's. From the point of health alone, her work is better for a woman. When the babies were little I'll grant her life was harder. But now they're not under her feet all the time. She has time for movies and matinees, for her bridge pals and if she doesn't feel like getting up some mornings her oldest or I get the breakfast."

There is more to the letter, but enough is presented here to indicate that the business woman who falls heir to a family is in the identical position, so far as work prejudice goes, as is the average husband.

We do not know who started the myth about the wife's job being the slave's job compared to her mate's. But for a long time the American woman has managed to hold this weapon over the male head. She has managed to get herself over-exploited as a wonder when she does do her housework herself.

Perhaps the idea has been brought down from pioneer days when women did pull their own weight in the boat. Anyway, the popular idea among a large group of domestic women today is that no matter how hard a man works on his job, no matter how long his hours, the wife's job is always the harder one. Monotony of duty is her long argument, as if monotony were not a part of modern industrial life, as well.

Comparatively few men can vary the routine of their day as can almost any wife any day she wants to. The queer thing is that rebellion over domestic duties has increased as labor saving devices have multiplied, permitting the domestic woman more and more leisure.

Invite Public to Hospitals on Thursday

BY KATHERINE KELLEY.

Hospitals of Chicago will throw open the doors, in accordance with the proclamation of President Hoover, on Thursday and invite the public in to inspect from basement to attic the huge buildings devoted to the care of the sick. The laymen may see for themselves on National Hospital day the latest improvements in equipment, both for the care of patients and the cure of disease.

Hospital day is the birthday of Florence Nightingale, pioneer nurse of 75 years ago. She directed the nursing of soldiers in the Crimean war when sanitation, as it is practiced today, was unknown. Under unskilled nursing the mortality of wounded soldiers had been 427 per thousand, but after Florence Nightingale assumed the work it decreased to 22 per thousand.

"The United States is blessed above all nations in the number, variety, and excellence of its hospitals," said President Hoover in his proclamation. "Nowhere is private generosity and public wisdom better expressed than in the support of these institutions for the alleviation of human suffering.

"The hospitals are meeting an unusual demand upon their facilities this year, especially in the field of free service. It is therefore especially appropriate to call to the attention of all the people that May 12 is National Hospital day, and to recommend that where possible, our people on that day visit hospitals and familiarize themselves with the splendid service to the community."

A recent survey of Chicago hospitals by Dr. Bert Caldwell, secretary of the American Hospital association, revealed that 34 per cent of their work is free service. Over $3,000,000 is required annually to operate Cook County hospital. Each year an average of 10,000,000 patients, or about one-twelfth of the entire population of the country, is cared for in hospitals.

National Hospital day is sponsored by the National Hospital association, of which Paul Fesler is president, Dr. Caldwell secretary, and Asa Bacon treasurer. Miss Veronica Miller is Chicago chairman of National Hospital day.

"Spinach can be the most delectable or the most abominable food on earth!"

That is what one of Chicago's most exacting food connoisseurs declared to me as we sat lunching over veal birds and a most unbelievably ethereal spinach soufflé. Of course, I cocked an ear—and caught this:

"Folks forget foods are as temperamental as people. No wonder so many of them don't like spinach. They don't give it a chance. Why spinach——" And my friend was off. But his eulogy on spinach set me thinking He was right. The average person nowadays realizes the value of spinach as a valuable source of minerals and vitamins and an excellent means of putting roughage into the diet, but it does seem that the big majority haven't discovered that the first thought of method of steaming spinach is only one of the scores of possible ways of preparing it. And how many times have I seen the most hard boiled spinach despisers turn into spinach fans when a happy thought inspired the cook to camouflage or glorify the day's "greens" in a fluffy omelet or a creamy egg soup or spirit spinach into dumplings or crusty croustades!

Spinach dumplings will make a good starter. Here's how:

To a regular dumpling recipe based on

2 cups flour
5 teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons fat
¾ cup milk

add one-fourth cup of flour, an additional teaspoon of baking powder, and three-fourths cup drained, sieved spinach. This dough may be placed by spoonfuls on top of a briskly boiling stew, or in a steamer set over the stew kettle. Cover tightly and boil for ten or fifteen minutes. Remove the dumplings and serve on a hot plate around the stew.

Or a pet spinach soufflé of my own is made this way: To one cup of sieved cooked spinach add one cup of heavy white sauce and the beaten yolks of two eggs. Season to taste, and fold in the stiffly beaten whites of two eggs. Turn into a greased dish, set in a pan of warm water, and bake in a moderate oven [350 degrees F.] for about twenty minutes. Sprinkle with a peppy grated cheese and serve at once.

The French call spinach "mort au beurre," and they assure us there is no more glorious way for butter to die than on tender, flavorful spinach. We have the French to thank, by the way, for the delicious spinach in cream we find at our very best restaurants. For this, steam the leaves, chop or put them through a sieve, and simmer for a few minutes in fresh butter. Just before serving add a sprinkling of sugar and a little rich cream.

And do you have a recipe for spinach custard? It's a great little luncheon special, and so is baked spinach ring made to encircle creamed mushrooms. If these aren't in your files, won't you let me send them to you? And, of course, if you have discovered some new spinach enticers, you know we will be more than glad to add them to our files.

And now, one more spinach thought. It's for spinach wafers for the soup course—simple to prepare, yet novel.

SPINACH WAFERS.
¾ cup sieved spinach.
2 eggs, well beaten.
1 bouillon cube.
Salt and pepper.

Dissolve the bouillon cube in two tablespoons of hot water and add to the spinach and eggs. Season and spread in a shallow tin placed in another tin of warm water. Bake in a moderate oven [350 degrees F.] for fifteen minutes. Cut in small diamonds and serve several in each bowl of soup.

Makeup After Forty Requires Skilled Hand

It's Wise to Avoid Too Bright Rouge.

BY ANTOINETTE DONNELLY.

Which make the worst makeup mistakes—the older or the younger women?

The younger women may make them, but they do not show so blatantly as the older ones. The younger ones probably do not make as many mistakes in this regard because to them belongs the zest for study, investigation of makeup products and experimentation. The older one is likely to accept the advice of a neighbor or acquaintance and buy for her brunette self what her blond or gray haired neighbor confides as the latter's favorite rouge. Or she may take her makeup purchase tip from a much younger woman, which leads to facial effects that are not best for the older face.

A point that is forgotten by the older woman is that her skin does undergo a color change, regardless of how seemingly young she may have kept it. There is in older skins a faint bluish suggestion. The cold weather brings this fact out in the open clearly enough. But the skin canvas on which the older woman works is not the same pure complexion tone a girl in her early twenties has. The bluish suggestion does not respond in complimentary terms to yellowish, orange or bright red or pink rouge. In fact, what the older skin needs to bring out its best charms, and it may have many, is subtlety in makeup and more subtlety.

If the skin is sallow, a soft rachel base powder with a medium toned rouge, the latter simply brushed over the cheek surface, is a safe experiment. Older women can't flaunt the daring red in lipstick colors the younger women can. It does hard things to the face and to the teeth coloring. It is difficult for one to advise just what colors the older one should wear, but if a woman will only realize that she is not qualified to wear youth's daring colors in makeup any more than she is qualified to adopt youth's daring manners and dress styles she will have gone a big step forward in creating a better facial picture for herself.

The older woman should have one of the smal powder brushes to wipe off all surplus powder after she has gone over the surface with a powder puff. Powder frequently adds age in the dry skinned look of the obviously powdered. Some older women were better off without powder, really.

Tailored Styles Fashionable for Informal Evening

BY BETTINA BEDWELL.

PARIS.—[Special.]—About the most elegant ensemble to be found in Paris for informal evening wear is the long evening dress and little jacket that are tailored like a severe daytime suit. The fashionable Parisienne has adopted this kind of outfit, which looks new and different, and appears in it with a little hat atop of her curls when she dines and dances in the public eye.

A feature of such ensembles is the scarf that is worn at the neckline of the jacket. This detail is an essential part of the tailored effect, though it is often soft and feminine. Velvet scarfs in such bright tones as geranium red and royal blue are worn with tailored evening outfits of white. Scarfs of the material of the ensemble are quite as fashionable, and they are worn like daytime scarfs, close around the neck, arranged like an Ascot tie or in big cat bows.

The tailored ensemble from Louiseboulanger, sketched today, is one of the many ensembles of this type made of dotted chiffon and crêpe silk. The frock is of black chiffon with white dots and has a hem made of a plaited ruffle. The long sleeves of the dress show below the short sleeves of the white crêpe jacket with its black dots. The scarf of this jacket is black and white with plaited ruffle ends, and the jacket ends at the waistline in a tie-on belt of black.

Prize Winning Chorus Charms with Concert

Ukrainian Group Is Given High Praise.

BY EDWARD MOORE.

One of the greatly enjoyable choral performances of the season took place at Kimball hall last night when the Ukranian chorus of Chicago appeared under the direction of George Benetzky. This gaily costumed, a cappella organization of thirty-five excellent singers was the prize winner in the Chicagoland Music Festival contests of 1930 and 1931. I was not one of the judges on either occasion, which fact gives me the more freedom to congratulate those who served in that capacity for their decision.

For the Ukrainian chorus is uncommonly skilled in the art of song. Whether their voices are raised in full strength or whether they go into the peculiar buzzing hum which is one of their effects, they are always musical, with many devices of expressive contrast but always with the main line of the composition in mind. Most of their program was in a language outside the customary experience of the music critic, but occasionally they made a concession of English.

Dett's "Listen to the Lambs," sung in the midst of a group from the Russian liturgy, was one. It was an extraordinary experience to hear this work sung in a tone quite different from that of the Negro choruses that usually sing it, yet piling up wave upon wave of dramatic effect, and with complete, utterly simple reverence.

Drama is in all their singing. Whether it happened to be religious songs or work songs or folk songs of the open air, everything they did was touched with the theater, a completely natural, unaffected, unselfconscious theater, yet with drama quite as much as song tone as part of its essence. They are a noteworthy organization.

Kimball hall did double musical service yesterday, for Marvin Jacobs, pianist, gave a recital there in the afternoon, playing Beethoven, Chopin, Poulenc, Gliere, and many other composers with equal facility and effect. He has a decisive talent and an excellent pair of hands with which to give it effect. His approach to his music is intelligent and sympathetic, hampered only by a lack of discipline which permits him to take undue liberties on sudden, unexpected, and not entirely correct changes of tempo.

Long Bicycle Ride to Boost Olympic Games

BY GEORGE SHAFFER.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Hollywood, Cal., May 8.—Neil Hamilton has agreed to ride by bicycle from the Los Angeles city hall to the California state capitol and deliver a message from Mayor John Porter of Los Angeles to Gov. James Rolph, inviting the latter as official guest of Los Angeles at the Olympic games. Hamilton will be accompanied on his cycle marathon by his trainer, Clinton Hester, on a second bicycle. After they get to Sacramento the pair are scheduled to go to San Francisco and deliver another invitation to Mayor Angelo Rossi of that city. They will come back to Los Angeles by plane. The actor expects to ride from Los Angeles to San Francisco, about 490 miles, in five days, from May 13 to May 18.

Much was made of the announcement by George J. Schaefer, general sales manager of the Paramount corporation, at the annual convention here last week that Paramount has managed to effect a $11,000,000 saving in its operation expenses during the last year. "The easy money days of the film business are gone forever," Schaefer said.

Edna May Oliver is forsaking the films which elevated her from an obscure debut to a starring contract within two years. She is going back to Broadway to play in Ziegfeld's revival of "Show Boat," in which she had an original rôle. When the musical comedy run is over she'll come back and resume film making at Radio.

The electricians with the "Strange Interlude" company liked Clark Gable so well they presented him with a set of spurs. He's a horseback fan.

Hearings on Leslie Fenton's demurrer to the $250,000 breach of promise action instituted by Julie Carter are scheduled in Superior court tomorrow. Miss Carter, who is 19 years of age, formerly worked in films.

Mother Enjoys Her Day; Youth Week Is Opened

Like every other community the length and breadth of the land, Chicago said it yesterday with flowers and candy, perfume and gloves and silk hose, telegrams and greeting cards, telephone and personal cards—because that sunny Sunday was mother's special day. Estimates of the gifts that poured into her home and her arms in the spirit of the observance elude the most efficient statistician. But from the simple poetic message to the rarest and costliest of the gifts the sentiment was the same.

In the pulpits yesterday morning pastors eulogized mother love and mother service. In her own home family gatherings galore celebrated the day and made vocal the appreciation so seldom spoken. For once the family automobile was mother's, the honor place at the table belonged to her, and her choice ruled in the selection of where to go and what to do for the rest of the day.

Mother had her day yesterday, and now—youth has its week. Beginning this morning a full program will be launched with one of the most extensive and intensive physical surveys ever attempted in any large city. Only the donated services of the combined membership of the Chicago Medical and Chicago Dental societies could make possible such activities as are planned.

Some time ago, financial pressure forced the city health department to discontinue the examinations of the school children. This vast "health invoice" of the younger generation planned for this week will make available to any of the 600,000 children of the public and parochial grade and high schools, a physical and dental examination without charge. Certificates printed for the occasion have been distributed through the school systems.

Superintendents of Schools William J. Bogan yesterday estimated that at least 100,000 of the public school youngsters would take advantage of this offer of a medical and dental audit. The Rev. D. F. Cunningham, superintendent of the Catholic schools, placed the estimate at 50,000 in the parochial institutions.

Approximately 8,000 physicians and dentists will participate in the examinations, which were arranged by a committee from two groups, and representatives of the Chicago Youth Week federation. Dr. Herman L. Kretschmer, president elect of the Chicago Medical, and Dr. Charles R. Barker, president of the Chicago Dental societies are directing the professional angle of the survey.

Leisure and its uses will be featured on the program tomorrow. Agencies and organizations directing the spare time recreations and exercises of the younger generation will be in charge of the day's program, demonstrating the right and the wrong way to utilize unoccupied hours. Schools, gymnasiums, parks and playgrounds will be the centers of attention.

NEW YORK SOCIETY

New York, May 8.—[Special.]—Prince and Princess Koudacheff have left the Waldorf-Astoria for their country place in Greenwich.

William N. Haskell 3d gave a dinner last night at the Sleepy Hollow Country club for his brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. John H. F. Haskell, in celebration of the first anniversary of their marriage.

Mrs. Henry Montague Earle has left for Dorset lodge, Old Waterbury, to pass the summer.

Miss Lillian Lang, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Albert Lang will be presented at the third court in Buckingham palace, London, on June 23, by Mrs. G. Howard Ferguson, wife of the Canadian high commissioner in London.

Judge and Mrs. William Shankland Andrews returned from South America on the Northern Prince.

months' holiday at Lake Wales, Fla.

Mrs. Leeds Mitchell and her father, Albert M. Day, have arrived at home from having spent the winter at Daytona, Fla. Mrs. Mitchell will not be at home long, however, for she is going east about June 1 to get Margaret Mitchell when Dobbs Ferry closes and to open the Mitchells' summer place at Nantucket.

Mr. and Mrs. William R. Odell, who spent the winter at the Lake Shore Drive hotel, have opened their house on Sheridan road in Lake Forest for the summer.

Mr. and Mrs. Donald R. McLennan of Lake Forest returned yesterday from an extended stay at the Virginia Hot Springs.

The Frederick H. Bartletts are at the Drake after having spent the winter in California. They do not plan to open their Lake Geneva residence this summer as they will return to the west shortly.

Miss Barbara Poole, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph H. Poole of Lake Bluff, underwent an operation for appendicitis in the Union Memorial hospital at Baltimore, Md., Saturday night. She was taken ill during services commemorating the 50th anniversary of St. Timothy's college at Catonville, near Baltimore. She is a graduate of the college and her sister, Nancy, is now a student at the school. Mrs. Poole left for Baltimore yesterday when she was advised of her daughter's illness.

Mr. and Mrs. Franklin P. Smith of Lake Forest, who always go to Palm Beach early in the winter and remain long after the "official" season has closed, are still in the south and will not close their estate, "Il Sogno," until the end of this month. Mr. and Mrs. John T. Pirie Jr. [Daisianna Smith], who were guests of the Smiths for several weeks, returned last week to Lake Forest.

Mr. and Mrs. Scott Durand are back from a four months' cruise around the world and are planning to be at their Lake Bluff estate for the summer.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Reynolds of 209 Lake Shore drive are back from a short stay in New York and are planning a trip to Europe before going to California for the summer.

The annual supper-dance of the University of Chicago Quadrangler alumnæ will be held on Friday evening at the Stevens hotel. Mrs. John A. Logan is chairman of the dance committee, which includes Miss Josephine Allin, president of the Quadrangler alumnæ; Mrs. Frank S. Parker, Mrs. Raymond W. Stevens of Highland Park; Mrs. Gordon Laing, Mrs. James M. Sheldon, Mrs. Ernest J. Stevens, and Mrs. Earl Hoover of Glencoe; Mrs. Leslie L. Cooke of Winnetka, and Mrs. Webster Stafford of Highland Park.

QUICK RELIEF FOR FRETFUL BABIES

Remarkable Compound Powder Soothes and Heals Irritated Skin

If your child is peevish and fretful . . . if he keeps you awake half the night, tossing about in his crib . . . do not scold! First make sure that you are not at fault!

More often than not, famous pediatricians tell us, the trouble may be traced directly to Urea Irritation. The stinging acids in the urine crystallize almost immediately into tiny, gritty particles—so small they are invisible, yet so harsh as to turn a baby's sensitive skin into a raw, inflamed surface.

Leading physicians and nurses everywhere recommend Z. B. T. Baby Talcum—not only because it protects little bodies from the cruel attacks of Urea Irritation, but because it serves, also, to prevent friction, chafing and prickly heat. Compounded according to the formula of a famous baby specialist, Z. B. T. contains a mild antiseptic which heals and soothes at the same time.

Protect your own skin from acid irritations! When perspiration causes painful chafing and itching, reach for the big gray Z. B. T. can. Use it freely as a dusting powder after your bath—for "burning feet" and after shaving.

Your druggist or chain store sells Z. B. T. in three sizes—10c, 25c and 50c. Resent substitutes! Get a can of Z. B. T. today and test it yourself. Or send us your name and address, with 3 cents to cover postage, for a full-size "Junior" can. Z. B. T. Products Co., Dept. CTF, Bronx, N. Y.

"More for Your Money"

Now That May Is Here— Has Even More Significance

One of Our Greatest Sales of Silks

Printed Crepes—Printed Chiffons—Plain Flat Crepes

Making Frocks of These Silks Means "Money in Your Pocket"

This is the lowest price we have had in years for silks of such distinction! Think of being able to make a frock of fine silk for $3 or $4 or $5—and of knowing all the while that the colors and the patterns in this group are outstanding in fashion as well. And the selection is so wide every individual taste can be suited!

The printed silks are in such a wide assortment of colors and designs that you can find just the thing you have in mind—those new two-tone prints with lots of white, the all-over prints which combine many colors. The plain flat crepes include all the colors in high fashion—and that means black and white, too.

BY EDWARD BURNS.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., May 8. — Ted Lyons lost his 1932 bow as a starting pitcher, but he battled the first place Senators for 13 2-3 exciting innings before Moe Berg drove in Carl Reynolds to give Washington a 6 to 5 victory just as darkness was about to end the contest in a draw.

TED LYONS.

The collaboration of the two White Sox alumni, Reynolds and Berg, wasn't the only instance during the afternoon where Ted was harrassed by former mates. Sheriff Harris, Comiskey college '30, scored the tying run in the last of the ninth after leading off with a single, and Berg would have wound up things in the twelfth if Appling hadn't made an inspired dive to knock down Moe's single over second with Cronin rounding third on what seemed a certain game smashing tally.

It's Not So Bad.

While defeats are getting harder and harder for the Sox to take, the one today left no sour taste with Chicago partisans. Blue, Selph and Appling all contributed brilliant plays in the defense and Kress rounded out the infield with his usual sparkling play. It was just that the Comiskey alumni association was not to be denied.

The Sox were behind, 3 to 0, before they got going. But in the third Berry singled and came home on Lyons' triple after which Ted scored to make the count 3 to 2. Lyons waded out of one jam after another, waiting for his mates to tie the score, and in the sixth Seeds, Selph, and Kress got together with hits and not only tied the score but made the count 4 to 3 in favor of Chicago.

The lead did not prevail throughout the inning, however, for after walking, old Joe Judge tied it up when he scored on a triple by old Sam Rice, batting for Marberry—just a couple of 40 year olds doing their stuff. Patriarch Rice, however, was out when he sought to stretch his triple to a homer.

Appling Soaks One.

Then there was a series of more exciting jams on both sides until the ninth. Kress doubled with one out. Blue flied out and Berry was passed to get at Appling. Luke crossed up the strategy by doubling to score Kress and put Fothergill on third, but further production failed.

So the Sox were leading 5 to 4 at the start of the Senators' ninth. Harris batted for Spencer, singled to left, took second on a sacrifice and scored on Myer's single. Manush and West were disposed of by Appling.

Fonseca and Appling singled to start the eleventh but a double play wrecked Sox hopes. Another double play spoiled things in the twelfth and the Sox got a man to second in the thirteenth.

In the tenth the Senators had two on, in the eleventh they had two on and in the thirteenth they had the bases full, all to no avail.

Cronin started the fatal fourteenth

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

Burleigh Grimes' official coming out party as a Cub came dangerously close to being a social flop yesterday. The veteran pitcher started off as if he hadn't recovered from his labors in the late world series, and a 30,000 crowd resigned itself to a miserable afternoon. But the Cubs corrected everything. They bounced old man Dazzy Vance right out of the place, kept going against various successors, and finally concluded with a 12 to 5 triumph for three straight over the Brooklyn Dodgers.

BURLEIGH GRIMES.

Six hits and three passes off the veteran Grimes in the first two innings provided the Brooklyn athletes with a four run lead, but the spitballing patriarch hurriedly corrected the impression that his arm was a goner, at least for the afternoon. As soon as a double play pulled him out of a jam in the second he began to unfold his real tricks and from then to the finish had nothing to worry about except what he'd order for dinner.

Vance Departs in Third.

Some of Grimes' confidence undoubtedly was revived by the prompt manner in which his fellow workers went to work on the matter of wrecking Vance's ambitions. The old fellow was a good pitcher for one inning. In the next he was surprised by three smashes, which cut into his lead. And in the third he suddenly took such a turn for the worse that three men walked in a row. The services of two other hurlers were needed to quell the disturbance, but by that time five Cubs had scored. Thereafter there were other Dodger mound workers, and also more Cub hits, in which the bottom half of the batting order figured.

Grimes Shaky at Start.

Grimes' bad first inning might have been a bit worse if it hadn't started with Grimm stabbing a liner by Frederick. O'Doul followed with a two base drive past Grimm and scored when Stripp hit one of equal length to the opposite corner of the lot. Grimm slapped down Boone's grounder, but couldn't recover in time for a putout. Stripp went to third on the hit. Wright fanned, but Cuccinello walked. Kelly singled to center to score a pair of his mates. Lopez's fly to Stephenson concluded the unhappy inning.

With a single, double and two passes added to his misery in the second, Grimes no doubt considered himself lucky to escape with no more than one run. Vance started this rumpus with a single through short and went to third on Frederick's double to right center. Then Grimes took himself out of the picture, but after a stroll to the dugout for a fresh chew of slippery elm he returned to his work. The runners didn't move while Herman was throwing out O'Doul. But a walk to Stripp filled the bases and a pass to Boone forced Vance to score, after which Wright bounced to Herman for a double play.

Work on Ageing Vance.

The Cubs coupled up three hits in their part of the second to reduce the Brooklyn lead. Moore flied out, but nobody could reach Stephenson's high fly back of first base and he galloped to second. Hemsley moved him the rest of the way on a two bagger to left. Grimm whipped a single straight over second and Hemsley dashed

ARNOLD SETS NEW RECORD AT ROBY, WINS 3 RACES

Kroger Injured in Crash with Brooks.

Billy Arnold won the three feature races at Roby speedway yesterday.

Dick Kroger was knocked high into the air during the 10 mile handicap and dumped on the track in front of a dozen cars when he collided with the car driven by Bill Brooks. Kroger, driving Jack Petticord's car, was taken to St. Mary's hospital in East Chicago seriously injured.

Arnold, racing for the first time since his accident in the Indianapolis race last year, drove with caution in the early stages of each race, but soon pushed his Boyle Valve special ahead. His time of 3:45 for the last 5 mile match race was a track record, as was his qualifying lap of 43.65 seconds in the morning, which broke the old mark of 44 seconds, held by Lou Schneider, winner of last year's Indianapolis race.

Ira Hall and Deacon Litz were second and third in the time trials, qualifying to oppose Arnold in the match races.

Arnold left last night for Indianapolis to prepare for the 500 mile sweepstakes May 30.

FIRST RACE, 5 MILES—Won by Bill Brooks, Fronty; John Wohlfiel, Miller, Detroit, second; Peter Romovich, Frontenac, Gary, third. Time, 4:04.

SECOND RACE, 10 MILES—Won by Ira Hall, Davenport, Miller; Deacon Litz, Indianapolis, Miller, second; John Sawyer, Milwaukee School Special, third. Time, 7:42 1-5.

THIRD RACE, 2 MILE MATCH—Won by Billy Arnold, Chicago, Boyle Special; Ira Hall, Davenport, second, Deacon Litz, third. Time, 1:32 4-5.

FOURTH RACE, 10 MILE SPECIAL JAM EVENT—Won by Ira Hall, 75 points; Litz, 50 points, second; Carl Young, Chicago, 15 points, third. Time, 8:10.

FIFTH RACE, 5 MILE MATCH—Won by Billy Arnold; Ira Hall, second [Litz broke steering gear while leading in third mile]. Time, 3:51.

SIXTH RACE, 10 MILE HANDICAP—Won by Ira Hall; Carl Young, second; John Sawyer, third. Time, 7:46 4-5.

SEVENTH RACE, 5 MILE MATCH RACE—Won by Arnold; Hall second; and Sawyer, third. Time, 3:45 1-5.

EIGHTH RACE, 2 MILES—Won by John Sawyer; Carl Young, second; Ira Hall, third. Time, 1:45.

NINTH RACE, 5 MILE CONSOLATION—Won by Harold Sievert; L. G. Skelly, second; Don Rhue, third. Time, 4:28.

A NEW DAY, A NEW GRID RULE; PUNT KICKOFF BANNED

Hanover, N. H., May 8.—(AP)—The national football rules committee has revoked the rule allowing the punt as an alternate form of kickoff, it was announced today by E. K. Hall of Dartmouth, chairman of the committee. As a result only the place or drop kick will be allowed next fall.

It was stated that experiences in spring practice throughout the country showed the rule requiring five men on the defensive team to remain on their own 45 yard line until the ball is kicked, coupled with the use of the place or dropkick, was enough to allow the kicking team to get down the field before heavy interference could form.

The original change in the code was made last winter in an effort to eliminate mass interference and the flying wedge in the kickoff. The change eliminating the punt was made in a mail vote of the rules committee.

FRANK BENKOVIC WINS PETERSEN BOWLING CLASSIC

Frankie Benkovic, Milwaukee bowler, who, with Charley Daw as his partner, won the recent A. B. C. doubles championship, last night led the field of 160 star bowlers who participated in Petersen's individual championship bowling classic and won the $1,000 grand prize. Benkovic shot games of 222, 182, 214, 232, 247, 257, 235, and 198 for a total of 1,787. The prize winners:

F. Benkovic, Milwaukee	1,787
W. Lenzen, Chicago	1,778
W. Rappenhagen, Detroit	1,768
Joe Norris, Detroit	1,734
Wally Freitag, Chicago	1,719
K. Pagel, Chicago	1,709
Skang Mercuric, Cleveland	1,706
H. Klatt, Chicago	1,703
E. Krems, Chicago	1,701
George Jackson, Fort Wayne, Ind.	1,682
Charles Daw, Milwaukee	1,671

BURGOO KING IS GOOD BUT FRAIL, BRADLEY ADMITS

Doesn't Know When Derby Winner Will Race.

BY FRENCH LANE.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Louisville, Ky., May 8.—Except for a lot of torn, tattered and worthless pari-mutuel tickets, a headache here and there and the usual oratory by folks with an alibi, there was little evidence today of the Derby drama enacted here for the 58th time just 24 hours ago.

The stars and the also rans were on their way to new conquests. The crowd which cluttered up all the Blue Grass country just for a day had vanished before the morning after the night before.

Burgoo King, the Derby winner, left for Belmont Park this morning. His running mate, Brother Joe, which finished next to last, was en route to Idle Hour farm. He developed ankle trouble which caused his hurried return home. He may not race again this year.

Everybody Goes East.

Economic, second in the Derby, Stepenfetchit, which finished third, Brandon Mint, Overtime, Tick On and Lucky Tom are others en route east tonight. So was Universe, winner of the Woods in New York but unable to fill his engagement in the Derby.

Jockeys James, Sande, Ensor, Horn, Garner, Ellis, Walls and Pascuma also were hurrying back to the seaboard courses, some of them headed for Pimlico in Maryland and others routed through to New York.

Col. Edward R. Bradley, who is the first owner to win three Kentucky Derbies, directed the shipping of Burgoo King by telephone from Idle Hour farm.

"He's a nice horse, but a delicate fellow, and we can't map out his future campaign until he gets down to New York and shakes off the strain and the excitement of the Derby," the Colonel said of Burgoo King.

"He's eligible for the Preakness, Belmont Stakes, American Derby and Classic," he continued. "But he's such a delicate colt we will hardly know from week to week where he will race.

He Beat Some Dandies.

"We might start him in the Preakness, but that will not be decided until the middle of the week."

Burgoo King's three great objectives, Col. Bradley hinted, are the Belmont Stakes, the American Derby at Washington Park, both to be run in June, and the $70,000 Arlington Classic in July.

"He's not the greatest horse that ever came from Idle Hour farm," Col. Bradley said. "But he's a right good horse; much better I think than his hollow victory yesterday indicates. If

THE WINNER.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., May 8.—As per custom, The Wake this morning visited the barn of Burgoo King, Derby winner, for a post-race expression of opinion. "Good morning, Mr. Champion," we said while standing just outside the E. R. Bradley stable. No response from within. "Good morning, Mr. Champion," we repeated quite a bit louder.

"Ah, I heard you the first time," came a sleepy but not unfriendly voice from within the stall, "but I hoped perhaps you'd not stay and I could sleep a little longer."

"Howdy feel?" we inquired.

"Terrible," answered the Derby winner. "It must have been something I ate." At this hackneyed excuse we looked around a bit and saw plenty of empties which had not contained food. There was no question that Burgoo King and other horses of the stable had celebrated the Idle Hour farm's third victory, something accomplished by no other owner in the history of the Kentucky Derby.

Burgoo King, eyes a little bleary in the corners, with those red veins prominent, roused himself to be the good fellow that he really is. Excusing himself, he retired to the bathroom, emerging in a green and white bathrobe of the stable colors, and carrying a towel. It was wet at the end. "Don't mind if I rub this across my forehead, do you? You know how it is, but at that I think we had it coming. Brother Joe isn't even up yet."

"Indeed, I'm sorry to have disturbed you. I'm not so keen myself," we apologized. "Now what about this Derby and those which finished behind you?"

"Well, you saw the race yourself," Burgoo King replied, "and you saw how easily I won. Possibly the field was not up to the class of some previous years. That's what they said when Dad [Bubbling Over] won in 1926, although his time was the second best ever run up to then.

"But when some experts call us a lot of plow horses, I protest. I raced with the leaders, always within striking distance but not trying to make the pace. This early pace could have been faster, but there was no reason why I should make it so. I was awaiting the stretch run. Then I came away to win as handily as any Derby colt of recent years.

"You remember when I talked to you early in the week I told you that Tick On and myself really figured on our 2 year old form. I also told you Economic was dangerous. True, I underestimated the Whitney horses, for which a lot of excuses now are being advanced. It's certainly not my fault they had bad racing luck. If they were so good why didn't they stay up there in the first flight like I did?"

"What about Tick On?" we asked.

"He's a good colt. There was personal satisfaction in beating him because he finished ahead of me last fall at Pimlico. But he must get over that fractious temperament if he's going to win any big stakes. Of course, that silly fife and drum corps no doubt upset him.

"Since we won $52,350 in this race, I'll naturally keep on going. I hardly expect to start in the Preakness with its narrow track and bad turns, but I'm out for the Belmont stakes, the American Derby at Washington Park, and the Classic at Arlington, so I'll see you in Chicago.

"By the way, Harve, can't you fix up a little party for me there? You live in Evanston, don't you? I'd love to be host to a group of Northwestern co-eds. Get a few of those good looking Thetas and Kappas and we'll all go out to the Studio. Ask Dal Marvil, Jack Riley, Reb Russell, Pug Rentner, and Ollie Olson to come along. We'll do some football fanning. You know Simrall, former Michigan captain, came from my town.

"I've avoided the I-told-you-so stuff pretty well, but I really did tell you and you'll have to admit that. I said Bradley would win and that it wouldn't be Brother Joe. All right. Plow horse or not, and I think not, let some of these fellows who talk so wise when they're not running come out and try to beat me or Economic or Stepenfechit. You don't become a champion just by wisecracking. Thank you for calling. See you in Chicago."

Derby Aftermath.

The Wake picked the Derby Tick On, Bradley entry, Economic, and Whitney entry, Eliminate Tick On and that's the way they finished. For those interested in our personal welfare, we played Tick On to win, Economic for place, and Bradley entry to show. Of course the Tick On money was burned, but the other two cashed, causing a satisfactory accretion to our $15 investment.

SING SING ELEVEN STARTS DRILL TO EVEN COP SERIES

Ossining, N. Y., May 8.—[Special.]—Sing Sing prison's football team has started spring training. An outside civilian coach has been retained and Capt. Alabama Pitts is putting his squad through an hour workout each day.

The Sing Sing fans, to say nothing of the alumni, are none too well pleased with the team's showing last fall, particularly against the Port Jervis police department team.

Pitts devoted most of the winter to devising a new frick play for the Port Jervis homecoming game next fall.

STEINER DEFEATS PAUL DE BRUYN IN N. Y. MARATHON

New York, May 2.—[Special.]—Defeating Paul De Bruyn, winner of the Boston marathon, 20 year old William Steiner of the 258th Field Artillery today won the Metropolitan A. A. U. championship, decided over Brooklyn streets.

Although he was fifth to the German champion in the Boston marathon, a little more than a fortnight ago, Steiner was far the better man today. He crossed the line two-thirds of a mile ahead of De Bruyn in 2:38:56 4-5.

WISTORT FIGHTS MERHAR TONIGHT AT WHITE CITY

Three Eight Rounds Top Malloy Card.

Tonight's Card

Joe Merhar vs. Pete Wistort, eight rounds, heavyweights.
Henry Lenard vs. Johnny Ryan, eight rounds, 139 pounds.
Jerry Crano vs. Clyde Hull, eight rounds, 160 pounds.
Meyer Frager vs. Jimmy Peters, four rounds, 138 pounds.
Bobby Allen vs. Servina Fabia, four rounds, 128 pounds.
Wrestling bout, 15 minutes.

Three eight round bouts will headline Mique Malloy's boxing show at White City, 63d street and South Park avenue, tonight. It will be ladies' night, all women being admitted free.

Joe Merhar, Butte, Mont., heavyweight, and Pete Wistort of South Chicago will meet. Merhar is substituting for Les Marriner, who was forced to withdraw because of an arm infection.

Merhar has been training with Tuffy Griffith, his stablemate, for more than a week and is reported to be in good condition. Merhar hasn't fought since his arm was broken in a bout against Babe Hunt at Wichita, Kas., nearly two years ago. Before that he won 13 of his last 14 matches.

Lenard Faces Southpaw.

Another eight round bout brings together Henry Lenard, South Chicago junior lightweight, and Johnny Ryan, Milwaukee southpaw. Lenard will be seeking his third straight victory. He knocked out Joey Freeman and whipped Paul Dempsey. Ryan is making his first start in Chicago.

Jerry Crano, west side middleweight, and Clyde Hull of Clark, S. D. fight in the opening eight round match. This will be their second meeting. Last December Hull held the hard hitting west sider to a ten round draw.

Allen Meets Fabia.

Two four round preliminary contests are carded. Meyer Frager and Jimmy Peters, Chicago junior welterweights, battle in one. The other is between Bobby Allen, west side featherweight, and Servina Fabia, Filipino boxer. A 15 minute wrestling exhibition will open the show.

Maccabees Whip Brickies in Replay, 1-0

BY OFFSIDE.

The Maccabee All Stars defeated the Brickies yesterday, 1 to 0, in a replay of a semi-final game for the Triner cup. Despite the fact that the Brickies' play in the first period was superior, they were unable to score. In the second period Monroe of the Brickies was ejected from the game for fouling Ramsay of the Maccabees. Littleford of the Brickies gave victory to the All Stars in the final minutes when in clearing his goal he sent the ball into the net.

The Swedes defeated the Norwegians, 3 to 2, before a large crowd at 4600 West Fullerton avenue. The Swedes scored their three tallies in the first period when Johnson garnered two and Stanley scored one. Stavnem of the Norwegians scored twice in the final period.

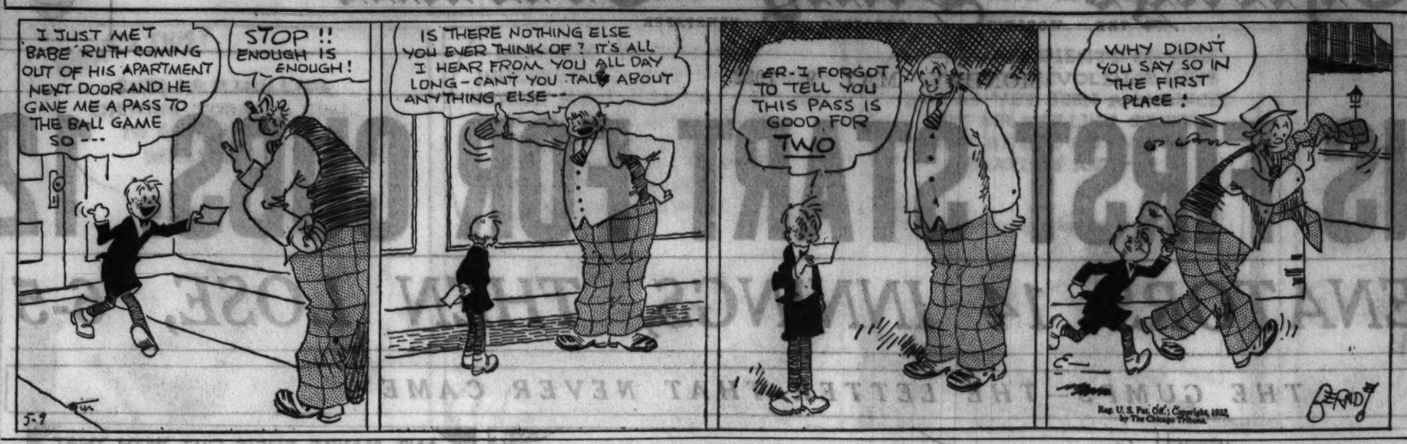
SMITTY—A GRANDSTAND PLAY



A Scholar, Fast Miler and B.M.O.C.—That's E.T. Turner

[This is the eighteenth of a series of sketches of university track and field stars in the central states.]

BY WILFRID SMITH.

He's a B. M. O. C. [big man on the campus]. That's Edwin T. Turner of the University of Michigan. In addition, Ed Turner is a good track man, which, withall, keeps him well occupied these spring days in Ann Arbor.

Turner is president of the junior class and president of Sphinx, the junior class honorary fraternity. These honors aren't easy to obtain in a student body of 10,000, which may prove that the wearer of the varsity "M" has an advantage, and again it may prove that the man with ability can win more than a varsity letter.

He's from Wyoming.

Edwin hails from Casper, Wyo. He's 19 years of age and there's nothing of the far western manner about him after three years at Michigan. He is enrolled in the college of literature, science and arts, disproving another theory of nonconformists to sports tradition that athletes enroll in the school of physical education as the easiest means of remaining eligible.

Turner's record as a sophomore marked him as an excellent prospect for championship honors this year in the Big Ten half mile race. This was thought to be true since Dale Letts, the Big Ten's best at this distance in 1930 and 1931, was graduated from Chicago last spring. Whether he will be depends largely on Chuck Hornbostel, Indiana's sophomore star, who already has won the indoor championship.

As a sophomore Turner began as anchor man on Michigan's two mile relay team which won at West Virginia. He finished second then in a triangular meet half mile against Ypsilanti Normal and Detroit City college. He won the half in a dual meet against Chicago when Letts did not compete. Turner finished second to Letts in the Big Ten indoor half mile in 1931, and later won his event in a meet with Cornell in 1:59.2.

Anchor Man on Two Mile Team.

Last spring on the outdoor tracks Turner was anchor man on the two mile team which won at the Drake relays and then placed second at the Ohio State relays. He was first in the Illinois dual meet and second in the Minnesota meet when he permitted Ralph Mueller, a teammate, to win in order to gain his varsity letter.

Michigan Hope

Turner ended his sophomore year by finishing second to Letts in the Big Ten half mile. Letts' time was 1 minute 54.4 seconds, while Turner was timed in 1:55.9. In June Turner was fifth in the National Collegiate track meet and the following month fifth in the junior National A. A. U. competition.

Sets 1,000 Yards Record.

This year Turner won the half mile in the Michigan-Cornell meet in 1 minute 57.4 seconds. In the Michigan A. A. U. meet he set a record for the 1,000 yards of 2 minutes 17.9 seconds. Hornboestel defeated Turner in the Big Ten indoor half mile. Hornboestel's time was 1 minute 57.1 seconds. So far Turner has been about two seconds faster indoors than a year ago.

Coach Charles Hoyt of Michigan believes Turner will run the outdoor half mile in 1:54, which will cause Hornboestel to pick up his spikes to outleg the Michigan boy. The decision will be reached May 21, when the track and field stars of the Big Ten get into action at Dyche stadium, Evanston.

Loughran Walks Comeback Trail; to Fight Hamas

New York, May 8.—(AP)—The approach of the lucrative outdoor season stirs the heavyweights into unaccustomed activity all along the boxing front this week, to the exclusion of the lighter divisions.

Among those who will be in action are Tommy Loughran, Steve Hamas, Mickey Walker, Johnny Risko, Charley Retzlaff, Jimmy Braddock, Max Baer, Ernie Schaaf, and Lee Ramage.

Loughran meets Hamas at Philadelphia Wednesday night in the first bout of a comeback campaign after a long layoff induced by a knockout at Hamas' hands in January and a trouncing by King Levinsky in December.

Walker, conspicuously successful against the big fellows, takes on Risko in a twelve rounder at Cleveland Tuesday, while Schaaf faces the Philadelphia southpaw, Jack Gross, in Madison Square Garden Friday. Retzlaff and Jimmy Braddock of Jersey City top Boston's card Friday.

Ramage, the San Diego boxer who stopped Hamas' string of victories recently, meets Yale Okun of New York at Los Angeles Tuesday, and Baer will fight Walter Cobb of Baltimore at Oakland, Cal., the following night.

Bouts on the national schedule include:

MONDAY—At Boston, Joe McKnight vs. Henry Firpo, light heavyweights, 10; at Portland, Ore., Frankie Stetson vs. Wildcat Carter, welterweights, 6.

TUESDAY—At Cleveland, Mickey Walker vs. Johnny Risko, heavyweights, 12; at Los Angeles, Lee Ramage vs. Yale Okun, New York, heavyweights, and Joey Goodman vs. Johnny Romero, welterweights, each 10.

WEDNESDAY—At Oakland, Cal., Max Baer vs. Walter Cobb, heavyweights, 10; at San Francisco, Wesley Ketchell vs. Jack Gibbs, middleweights, 10; at Philadelphia, Tommy Loughran vs. Steve Hamas, and Ralph Ficucello vs. James J. Taylor, heavyweights, each 10; Battle Kirchline vs. Mike Sullivan, and Tony Dublinsky vs. Sam Tribitt, each 6; at Niagara Falls, Ont., Maxie Rosenbloom vs. Harry Fuller, light heavyweights, 10.

THURSDAY—At Spokane, Don Fraser vs. Lee Page, welterweights, 6; at Tacoma, Fred Lenhart vs. Kenneth Lee, heavyweights, 6.

FRIDAY—At New York, Madison Square Garden, Ernie Schaaf vs. Jack Gross; at Boston, Charley Retzlaff vs. Jimmy Braddock, heavyweights, 10; at Detroit, Ray Miller vs. Wesley Ramey, lightweights, 10; at San Francisco, Andy Divodi vs. Paulie Walker, welterweights, 10.

Travers and Reekie Win Exhibition Match, 6 and 4

Ridgewood, N. J., May 8.—[Special.]—Jerome D. Travers, winner of four national amateur golf championships, and William Reekie, former metropolitan amateur champion, won an exhibition match, 6 and 4, today, defeating Ernest Thomas, Ridgewood county club champion, and Max Kaesche, prominent tournament golfer.

N. Y. AMERICANS WIN.

New York, May 8.—[U.P.]—The New York American soccer team defeated the Hakoah All Stars, 2 to 1, at Starlight park today in the first contest of their home series for the special Everlast cup.

BURGOO KING IS GOOD BUT FRAIL, BRADLEY ADMITS

he holds up in his training, he will show you before the middle of the summer."

While somewhat dissatisfied with the slow time in which the Derby was won, Col. Bradley believes Burgo King beat several good horses.

"It is so early in the year that it is hard to pick the best 3 year old," he said. "But Economic, Stepenfetchit, Tick On, Gallant Sir and Overtime are not bad horses. Any of them may develop into a champion."

The Boys Are Happy.

Col. Bradley didn't say what he intends to do with the Derby $52,350 purse Burgoo King won for him. He has already made gifts of $5,000, it is reported, to Trainer Dick Thompson and Jockeys James and Fator. Everybody from stable boy to Boss Barry Shannon on Idle Hour farm received a present today. Is it any wonder a holiday atmosphere prevails?

"Will James or Fator ride Burgoo King in his future engagements?" Col. Bradley was asked.

"They're both fine boys and corking riders," he answered.

If Burgoo King stays out of the Preakness next Saturday, that old $50,000 fixture will lose much of its color and it will be midsummer perhaps before a genuine 3 year old champion bobs up.

Col. Bradley will bet you on almost any proposition. But he won't attempt to name the new 3 year old champion. Not today, at least.

JACK AND MAX BEGIN TRAINING THIS WEEK-END

New York, May 8.—[U.P.]—With Jack Sharkey quoted a 7 to 5 favorite in the early betting, the Boston Lithuanian and Max Schmeling of Germany, world's heavyweight champion, will start training this week for their June title bout.

The dark, beetle browed boxer from Berlin will pitch his camp at Green Hill Lodge, near Kingston, N. Y., Wednesday and begin working out Thursday. Citizens of Kingston and its environs have declared a holiday Wednesday to welcome the German.

Sharkey will come down from Boston to see his stablemate, Ernie Schaaf, fight Jack Gross, southpaw heavyweight from Philadelphia, at the Garden Friday night. The gob will enter Gus Wilson's camp at Orangeburg, N. Y., Saturday.

Schmeling will occupy a little cottage at Green Hill lodge, forgoing the comforts and glamour of the palatial hotel there. His trainer, Max Machon, will live with him. He has not selected his sparring partners yet. After ten days of golfing at French Lick Springs the champion weighs about 194 pounds. He will take off about four pounds and enter the ring at about 190. Sharkey probably will have a ten pound weight advantage.

LAYTON MEETS HOPPE TODAY IN CHALLENGE PLAY

Johnny Layton, a ten time champion, will resume action against a famous opponent when he meets Willie Hoppe in the opening block of a 500 point three cushion match at Bensinger's Randolph street billiard room this afternoon. The match will end on Friday night. Charles McElligott will referee. Each player has posted a forfeit.

Layton twice defeated Hoppe in the final game in a world's title tournament here in Chicago, in Hoppe's only two bids for the world's emblem. They met in two games in a special tournament at Mussey's a short time ago, and Hoppe won both. Layton's challenge was the result of those defeats.

ZEISLER, DAVIS BREAK RECORD IN CASTING EVENT

Charles Zeisler, all around accuracy bait casting champion of the United States, and Eddie Davis, national one-half ounce accuracy bait champion, tied for first place with a record breaking score of 95 per cent in the fisherman's casting event at the Lincoln Park Casting club yesterday. A. J. Naugle was third with a mark of 94 per cent.

W. C. Mueller won the three-eighths ounce accuracy bait contest with a score of 93 per cent. Davis was second with 92 per cent and Naugle third with 90 per cent. Yesterday's events were preliminary to the national indoor fisherman's contest to be held at the Coliseum on Wednesday night in conjunction with the national outdoor life exposition which opens there today.

MILWAUKEE GETS ONLY 3 HITS, BUT WHIP FLORALS, 3-1

Loose Fielding Defeats Blankenship.

Loose fielding, inability to hit in pinches, cost the Duffy Florals a 3 to 1 decision to the Milwaukee Red Sox in a Wisconsin-Illinois league game at Shewbridge field yesterday.

Ted Blankenship struck out eight and allowed only six hits. The Duffys got seven off Al Franks. Mandy Brooks, once of the Chicago Cubs, and Rube Lutzke, former Cleveland third baseman, led the Red Sox defense. Each got one hit. Score:

MILLS SPLIT.

The Chicago Mills and the House of David divided a double header at Mills stadium yesterday, the Mills winning the first game, 7 to 5, and losing the second, 11 to 9. The Mills led, 7 to 4, until the seventh inning of the second contest, when the House of David scored seven runs.

Four hits off Noel, House of David pitcher, in the first inning of the opener gave the Mills an early lead of four runs. The scores:

FIREMEN, 15; SQUARES, 10.

Led by Rodeghier with a double, two triples, and a home run, the Chicago Firemen yesterday outslugged Logan Square, 15 to 10, at Logan Square park to stay in first place in the Wisconsin-Illinois league. Rodeghier hit his home run with the bases full in the fourth inning, which he had opened with a triple. The Firemen scored eight runs in that frame. Brilliant fielding by McCormick and O'Connell also aided in the victory.

KLINGBEIL WINS OLYMPIC BIKE QUALIFYING TEST

Al Klingbeil, of the South Chicago wheelmen, won the Illinois state Olympic unpaced bicycle trials yesterday, covering the 63 miles from Elmhurst to Virgil and return in 2:45:53. Second went to H. Ade, unattached, of Oak Park.

Fifty-three pedaled the distance for qualifying places in the mid-western sectional trials here on June 5, in which representatives from 20 states will compete.

Leon Bianchi, 13 years old, of 1022 George street, suffered a skull fracture when he collided with a truck in St. Charles, Ill. He was taken to the St. Charles hospital.

The ten riders who qualified for the sectional meet were:

Al Klingbeil, South Chicago Wheelmen; H. Ade, unattached, Oak Park, Ill.; Roy Witbouch, Lake View A. C.; Al Waldack, Belgian-American C. C.; Ed. Triest, C. V. Barrett A. C.; Al Cumming Jr., West Side Star Cycle club; Fred Guth, Henry Playground Wheelmen; A. Benson, Henry Athletic club; Gus Hentschel, Henry Playground Wheelmen, and Andy Cajet, Belgian-American C. C.

Galesburg Race Driver's Condition Still Serious

Trenton, N. J., May 8.—(AP)—Little improvement was noted to day in the condition of Archie Powell of Galesburg, Ill., racing driver, who crashed through a guard rail of the infield fence at the Langhorne speedway on Saturday. He is in Mercer hospital in a serious condition with a punctured abdomen. Powell was on the twelfth lap in a 25 mile race when for some unknown reason his car veered into the guard rail. The small racing car was traveling at top speed at the time of the mishap.

White Sox Battle Senators 14 Innings, Then Lose, 6-5

with a double and Reynolds walked. Blue and Selph made a sterling play to get Cronin at third, and Bluege flied to Rothrock. Then Berg picked on Lyons, one of the best pals he has in the world, and the game was over.

Senators Get Two Early.

The Sox were nipped in a sizeable effort to grab a lead in the first inning. Rothrock opened the game with a single to left and stole second. Seeds flied to Manush, but Selph walked. The bubble burst when Kress hit into a double play, Marberry to Cronin to Judge.

In their half of the first the Senators made two runs on an error, a single, and two infield outs. Myer was safe when Lyons failed to step on first after taking a throw from Blue. Manush singled to left and Myer reached third, Heinie going to second on a play at third. Myer scored while Appling was throwing out West, and Manush scored while Selph was throwing out Cronin. Lyons threw out Reynolds.

The Sox battery put Chicago back in the ball game at the start of the third inning. Berry singled to right and came home on Lyons' triple to right center. Ted scored on Rothrock's fly to Reynolds. Seeds and Selph flied out.

Lyons Gets Out of Jam.

In their second inning the Senators produced their third run. Judge doubled to left center, took third while Bluege was scratching a single off Selph's glove, and scored while Bluege and Spencer were going down in a double play.

Lyons got out of a heavy jam in the fourth inning. Reynolds tripled with one down and held third on Judge's tap to Blue. Bluege and Spencer walked, filling the bases, and then Selph threw out Marberry.

The Sox hadn't been able to get a man on base after Lyons' triple until after Rothrock had fanned to start the sixth. Then Seeds singled to left. Selph singled to center, putting Seeds on second, and when West juggled the ball Seeds dashed to third and Selph reached second. Kress then cracked a single to center, scoring Seeds and Selph. Blue hit into a double play.

The Sox's 4 to 3 lead did not last through the sixth. Judge walked and went to second on Bluege's sacrifice. Judge held second while Spencer flied to Fothergill. Then Rice batted for Marberry and tripled to left center. Judge scored easily, of course, but when Rice kept going in an effort to stretch it to a homer he was out at the plate, Seeds to Kress to Selph to Berry.

Sox Get One; So Do Foes.

Bluege threw out Selph to start the ninth. Kress knocked his double to the right field fence. Blue flied to Reynolds and Fothergill was given an intentional pass. Appling accepted the insult by doubling to right, Kress scoring and Fothergill stopping at third. Funk was put on third to run for Fothergill and Berry was given an intentional pass, filling the bases. Lyons forced Berry.

In the Senator half Harris batted for Spencer and singled to left. Kerr batted for Burke and put Harris on second with a sacrifice. Myer singled to center, driving in Harris with the tying run. Manush popped to Appling and Appling threw out West.

You know the rest.

Cubs Pile Up 12-5 Victory Over Dodgers

across the plate. The ageing Vance staggered through the remainder of the inning by getting Jurges on a popup to Kelly and fanning Grimes.

Vance started dispensing charity in the noisy third as soon as he had set down Richbourg. Herman walked. English walked. Moore walked. So did Vance, but to the shelter of the dugout. Thurston took over the thankless task and Stephenson cut one toward short on a high bounce. Wright hurried with the idea that a double play was possible, but he kicked the ball and it rolled almost to first base before being captured. Herman and English scored and J. Moore went to third on the error. He counted along with Stephenson on Hemsley's wind blown triple to right center. A single by Grimm scored Hemsley and Cy Moore rushed forth to end the riot by fanning both Jurges and Grimes.

Keep Hammering Away.

Stephenson made himself prominent again in the fifth by inaugurating the three run blast against Cy Moore. He singled to center, but was forced on Hemsley's intended sacrifice. Grimm bounced a single over the pitcher and Jurges bounched one over short, Hemsley scoring. Grimes took a hand by shoving a single down the right field line, Grimm scoring and Jurges legging it to third. Jurges ran home on Richbourg's fly to O'Doul. The next Cub run was the homer Johnny Moore hoisted into the right field seats at Hoyt's expense in the sixth.

The Dodgers couldn't resist showing a little more of their copyrighted comical baseball in the seventh. The Cubs profited accordingly. With two out Richbourg popped one of Heimach's twisters to the fence in right. Thinking that his legs were better than Boone's arm, Richbourg didn't quit running until he reached third. Cuccinello relayed the ball there to get him, but it bounced to the stand. Richbourg jumped up and dashed home with the twelfth run.

A double by Long Legs Kelly and a single contributed by Pinch Batter Picinich gave the Dodgers a run in the ninth.

Giants Move in Today for 3 Game Series with Cubs

The Giants will be with us today for the first of a three game series. The plan was to have Bob Smith greet them, but the ex-Brave reported himself suffering with a shoulder kink. This may force Lonnie Warneke, winner of four straight, to take this afternoon's pitching assignment for the Cubs.

Frederick gave a splendid exhibition of just how to drop a fly ball in the fourth. He closed his hands on Johnny Moore's lofter and then let it trickle to the ground. English, who was on first as the result of being hit on the shoulder, tried to race home on the error, but a perfect relay by Wright nailed him at the plate.

The Cubs did some of their fielding sitting down in the fifth. It was not only amusing but effective. Cuccinello lined to right center and Richbourg, while racing to get in front of the ball, skidded feet first but dragged his gloved hand behind him and made the stop. A moment later Lopez bounced to short and Jurges sat down but made the stop. While still seated he threw to Herman for a forceout.

Grimm used Umpire Klem as a backstop to stage one of his robbery plays in the fourth. Frederick drove one down the line. Grimm lunged over, grabbed the ball, bounced off Klem to change his direction and then went into the bag feet first to get the decision.

Hemsley collided with Kelly at first base in the sixth and twisted his right knee so severely that it was thought advisable to remove him from the game. Hartnett still is suffering from bruises received in a play at the plate several days ago, so James Zack Taylor had to take over the catching duties.

Philip Wrigley made his formal debut as a big league club owner yesterday. He saw the Cubs in their first regular game since the club was willed to him by his father, the late William Wrigley.

How I Got My Start in Baseball

BY BILL JURGES.
(As told to Irving Vaughan.)

My start in baseball was delayed slightly by my duties as chauffeur of a hay burner attached to a grocery delivery cart in Brooklyn. During my two years at high school most of my time was taken up by this job, so there was no chance for me to respond to the urge to play on the school nine.

BILL JURGES.

After getting what I thought was enough education I hired out as a bank messenger. Maybe it was because I told them I was a ball player. The bank had a team and I became a member. Through this I graduated into semi-pro ball and the manager of the team happened to be friendly with somebody connected with the Newark International league Bears.

The Bears gave me a contract for 1927 and immediately shipped me off to Manchester, N. H. The deal was one of those conditional affairs, Manchester having the privilege of purchasing if I looked like a ball player. I don't know how good I looked, but it couldn't have been much if the price finally paid for me was any indication. Manchester took a chance to the extent of $100. When I went there I was listed as an outfielder, but played only one game before being switched to the infield.

After two seasons at Manchester I was more or less surprised one day to learn I had been picked up by a Cub scout, but my actual entry into the big league was still a long way off. The Cubs gave me to the Reading club, which they then owned, and two years elapsed before they remembered I was there. In the spring of 1931 I finally got into a Cub uniform at the Catalina island camp and I've been wearing the same clothes since, barring ten days served at Louisville last fall. I was sent there so that Louisville would ship Billy Herman to Chicago.

SOUTH BEND IS BEATEN, 7-6, 4-0, BY FORT WAYNE

South Bend, Ind., May 8. — [Special.]—Fort Wayne won both games of the Central league double header from South Bend today, 7 to 6 and 4 to 0. Piotrowski, South Bend High school pitching star loaned to the Twins by the Cleveland Indians, allowed only eight hits in the first game, but South Bend was unable to overcome the five run lead Fort Wayne took in the first inning.

Three runs in the seventh inning and Rhodes' four hit pitching decided the second game. Wisner, formerly with the New York Giants, who had replaced Jack O'Keefe for South Bend, was hit solidly in this inning. Score:

Boston Breaks Losing Streak; Triumphs, 7-5

Boston, Mass., May 8.—[Special.]—The Boston Red Sox broke their eight game losing streak today by defeating the St. Louis Browns, 7 to 5, in the series final. The victory was the Sox fourth and their second at home. Five hits and two walks accounted for five runs and victory in the seventh inning.

Danny MacFayden went the route for the Red Sox, although the Browns hammered him for eleven hits. Bruce Campbell, outfielder recently acquired from the White Sox, led the Browns with three timely hits. Score:

BIG SIX HITTERS DROP; TERRY OUT OF SELECT GROUP

Taking a day off was the best bet for major league batting contenders yesterday as all the leaders who played suffered severe drops in the averages.

Les Mallon and Pinkey Whitney of the Phillies gained the first two places in the National league through idleness when Hughey Critz and Bill Terry each made two hits in nine times at bat and lost 18 points apiece. Critz dropped to third place in the league and Terry slipped out of the Big Six.

Jimmie Foxx failed to hit in three times and also lost 18 points, but he held the major league lead at .419 as Carl Reynolds hit two out of six and dropped five points to .403. The standing:

Most Popular Sport? Fishing! Cry Fishers

BY BOB BECKER.

Fishing today is America's most popular outdoor sport, according to a survey made recently by the president of a fishing tackle manufacturers' organization. In expenditures made for equipment the golfer spends more than the fisherman. But in spite of all the land that has been turned into golf courses, the lakes and streams still lure more devotees than do the fairways and the greens.

Government figures compiled by the bureau of census show golf equipment sold last year covered by the manufacturers census amounted to slightly more than $21,000,000. As against this, expenditures for fishing tackle amounted to only $9,760,370. However, a survey of the popularity of various sports covering fourteen states recently submitted to Senator Harry B. Hawes, shows more than four times as many hunters and fishermen as golf players. The actual figures reported were hunters and fishermen, 4,420,876; baseball fans, 2,426,372; football fans, 1,218,184; golfers, 908,640 and tennis players, 363,456.

Fishers Seek Better Outfits.

Although the average golfer, even the dub, deflates his purse to a greater degree than the angler when he is bitten by the golf bug because he spends freely for his outfit, there is evidence that the fisherman is going in for better tackle and larger outfits. This is being shown in the care that the devotee of Izaak Walton is giving to the selection of the right kind of rods, reels and other items for a particular type of fishing. Just as the golfer [even the beginner], wants a bag full of clubs, so that he has the right weapon for any kind of shot, so the fisherman is going in for a selection of rods that will suit the sportiveness of the particular species for which he is angling.

If there ever was a year when fishermen could [from the standpoint of money required] consider using more than one fishing rod or adding to their equipment, this is the one. Tackle is down in price but still up in value. It's possible to buy bamboo or steel rods, excellent reels, lines, and even rubber waders for trout fishing cheaper than in former years.

See Big Year.

This is a fortunate situation for the devotees of the rod and line sport and represents a reflection of the times. Another interesting fact affecting this season's sport is the advance indication of how much fishing will be done this summer.

According to reports from various states it seems as if this were a year when more families will be fishing and camping than ever before. With family heads having more leisure time this year than in any recent years, conservation departments report the start of a migration to the open. Families are packing up camping outfits and setting up tents near lakes and streams for protracted stays. It's an economical life when there are fish to be caught and little or no overhead for rents.

There isn't much doubt that 1932 is going to see a big "to the wide open spaces" migration this summer.

DISASTER SEEN IN HIT-AND-MISS RENT SCHEDULE

Tax and Mortgage Needs Are Ignored.

BY AL CHASE.

Property owners who are maintaining apartment rental schedules that ignore tax and mortgage requirements, two things that have not yet even heard of the depression, are inviting inevitable disaster, according to Dayton Keith, former Chicago banker and exceptionally well informed on property management. And, what is worse, he states, this suicidal practice is jeopardizing the well being of all income producing real estate. Unity in combating this situation will do much to stabilize values, he believes.

DAYTON KEITH.
[Moffett Photo.]

"The revenue to be derived by local governments from real estate has not been decreased and, therefore, the actual amount of taxes to be paid by the owners of a definite piece of property is as high as ever," he said. "Interest must be paid on loans that were made on the valuation of four and five years ago.

"Only by astute management can the gap between the minimum earnings necessary to meet fixed charges, still on a 1928 basis, and the maximum yield which can be derived under 1932 renting conditions, be bridged.

Faces Wholesale Default.

"It's vitally imperative that these factors be justified with each other if real estate is to be saved from wholesale default. This can't be done if drastic rental reductions are to be allowed to drive realty values downward without relation to taxes, interest and depreciation charges, which are not correspondingly contracted.

"Despite the most slovenly management, any apartment building is capable of producing operating expenses; but these are only half the revenue that must be derived from a property.

"It's an easy matter to fill every apartment in a building by outdoing all competition in rent cutting. But this is of little avail, for the financial structure of even a fully occupied building is bound to be undermined if its rental schedule is determined irrespective of equitable return.

Management Improving.

"In the big battle for tenants that is raging today, property management is developing from a hit or miss process into a scientific profession. Under present conditions, all the acute skill a property manager can summon is required to derive from an apartment building sufficient revenue to meet taxes, interest, amortization payments and all the other charges that comprise the occupational expense of improved real estate.

"The operator of properties who looks beyond the problems of the current month is establishing his rent schedules on a basis that gives as much consideration to occupational charges as to operating expenses.

"There is a scientific method for establishing the rental value of a given apartment. The base for determining this factor takes into consideration the pro rata share of taxes, insurance, interest, depreciation, amortization and corporate expense that each room must bear, as well as the share of operating expense attached thereto. This base must then be adjusted for general desirability, outlook, light, air and relative size to fix the rent that must be obtained from each apartment.

Disregard Imperils All.

"Recognition of these factors must enter into the management of a property, whether it's in a healthy condition or under the jurisdiction of a receiver. One receivership property operated in disregard of these factors will tend to imperil the successful operation of all buildings in the neighborhood.

Mr. Keith gives several examples which disclose occupational charges much greater than operating expenses. Figures for a nineteen story building in Hyde Park, recently reorganized, show operating charges of $163.56 per room annually, as compared with occupational charges of $190.89, the latter comprising 53.8 per cent of the total expenses without adjustment for depreciation.

Operating costs of a similar building in Sheridan road, partially furnished, were $232.89 per room annually, as compared with $390.82 for occupational costs, the latter comprising 62 per cent of the total costs before depreciation.

Urges Unified Action.

"To divorce operating and occupational costs is to violate the rules of good economics, and this applies to any property, whether managed by an individual owner, a trustee, or receiver," said Mr. Keith. "Real estate in this city can be brought ashore only by a unified and sensible approach to this vital problem.

"If each and every factor in property management will ask, 'What rent must each room in my building produce each month?' and apply that base to the pricing of each apartment with adjustment only for general desirability; if, having established that minimum rental he'll courageously stick to it regardless of the temptation to shade it in order to put over a lease, real estate values will come immeasurably closer to stabilization."

GRAIN PRICES WORLD OVER DIP TO LOW OF YEARS

Russian Purchases Feature Wheat.

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

A most interesting situation confronts the grain trade the world over. Prices are the lowest in years. Liquidation in grains and securities has been the most drastic known. The traders have reached a stage at which there is a marked indisposition to press the short side of either grains or securities, and a growing inclination to buy on all breaks. It is not expected that there will be a material advance in prices unless general conditions are materially changed.

Speculative trading is spotted and sharp fluctuations within a narrow range features daily operations. The week in all was a memorable one because of the heavy deliveries on May contracts. It is estimated that around 15,000,000 bu of wheat were delivered on May contracts in the various markets throughout the week and all passed into strong hands. Deliveries of corn and oats were the largest in recent years and were taken by cash interests.

May Wheat Unchanged.

At the close May wheat in Chicago was unchanged compared with the previous week, corn was up ½c, oats 1½c higher, and rye 1¼c, net gains over the previous week. Deferred futures of wheat were ¾@1¼c, corn ¼@1½c lower, oats ¾@1¼c, oats ¾c higher to ¼c lower, and rye ¼@¾c higher than a week ago.

A striking feature of the week was the buying of 1,500,000 bu of Canadian wheat at Vancouver by Russia for shipment to Siberia with indications of 100,000,000 bu of wheat and a large quantity of flour to be bought in the near future. One explanation of this is that supplies in Siberia are small and traffic conditions on Russian railroads inadequate to move them from wheat surplus producing sections to others. Another report was that Russian is preparing for war with Japan.

Export sales of American wheat were liberal for the week, 1,500,000 bu by the farm board which is easily disposing of its 5,000,000 bu per month quota. The trade is uneasy as to whether the farm board will go into the new crop, but possibly congress will give it sufficient money to continue its operations.

Government Report Tuesday.

The government report on winter wheat is due on Tuesday afternoon at 3 o'clock, Washington time. Estimates are that it is to show from 5,000,000 bu less to 10,000,000 bu more than the official estimate of 458,000,000 bu in April. Private reports suggested 463,000,000 bu, against an average of 506,000,000 bu last month. Last year's harvest was 787,000,000 bu. There has been improvement in some sections, but not enough to offset deterioration in others and heavy abandonment of acreage. There will be no report on spring wheat.

Europe is expected to buy more freely, and probably will finish up the present season with the lightest stocks in years. Consumption in Europe has exceeded expectations and shipments to the end of April aggregated 587,000,000 bu compared with 553,000,000 bu last year and 441,000,000 bu two years ago. Estimates are that shipments to the end of July will be 208,800,000 bu, compared with 231,000,000 bu a year ago and 194,000,000 bu two years ago. It will require shipments of around 17,000,000 bu of wheat per week up to the end of July, and North America is able to furnish all that is required.

Latest cables from Russia suggest that its present agricultural policy is to be changed, especially in the way of collections of grain from farmers, with intimations of a price fixing program to be adopted.

Week's Price Details.

Corn Gains Friends.

Ready absorption of heavy deliveries of cash corn on May contracts which were absorbed by cash interests who are moving out large quantities to eastern markets brought a better feeling, forcing shorts to cover and inducing a little constructive buying by professionals who believe corn low enough. Prices declined to the lowest in 35 years, which brought about a better feeling toward the last. Country holders of corn are too busy planting the new crop to sell and deliver cash grain as liberally as in the previous week. Heavy shipments were made to eastern lake ports. Planting of corn has been delayed in parts of the corn belt by too wet weather, but with a change it should be finished within a few weeks.

General Mills, Inc., Reports Flour Output Recedes

General Mills, Inc., reports production of flour of mills in leading milling centers for the five weeks ending April 30 at 6,185,466 barrels, compared with 6,784,088 barrels for the same period a year ago.

Production of Soft Coal for Week 4,700,000 Tons

The National Coal association estimates bituminous coal production in the United States for the week ended April 30 at 4,700,000 net tons, compared with 4,750,000 for the week ended April 23.

Bond Market Turns Toward Higher Levels

New York, May 8.—(AP)—After descending to new depths for 1932 on three consecutive days of the last week the bond market turned around and reached for upper levels.

The attempt at recovery, except in some of the speculative rail and utility issues, was not of the buoyant type and any number of securities showed considerable hesitancy in joining the revival. The majority, however, raised their prices sufficiently to bring up the averages substantially.

Federal Buying Aids Bonds.

United States government obligations at one time gave up some of their recent gains. But when it was discovered that the federal reserve system still was buying heavily this group snapped back sharply and held around the highest prices of the year. Federals purchased by the reserve banks during the week amounted to around $96,000,000.

Corporate groups, which have paid little attention to the goevrnment department in previous sessions, for a change decided to trail along. At the same time these categories were somewhat encouraged by developments at Washington. President Hoover's messages demanding a speedy and nonpartisan balancing of the budget were well received, as was the sidetracking of the veterans' bonus measure.

Rail Bonds Do Better.

While there was no especially cheerful news for the railroads, most of the second grade carriers began a forward spurt on Wednesday and continued to climb during the remainder of the week. Recoveries, despite some profit taking, were the daily fare from Thursday to Saturday. Among the principal transportation gainers were bonds of Atchison, Baltimore and Ohio, Erie, Nickel Plate, Frisco, Missouri Pacific, Chesapeake corporation, Pere Marquette, Reading, Southern Pacific, New York Central, Rock Island, Chicago and North Western, and Illinois Central.

Of interest to railway bondholders was the application for a $10,000,000 loan from the Reconstruction Finance corporation by the Rock Island and the approval of a loan of $1,800,000 to the Frisco for use in paying overdue state taxes. The Frisco, however, agreed to reorganize its capital structure and reduce its fixed charges.

STATE'S BANKERS TO MEET MAY 23 AT SPRINGFIELD

"Banking in the reconstruction period" will be the theme for the 42d annual convention of the Illinois Bankers' association in Springfield, Ill., May 23, 24 and 25. M. A. Graettinger is executive vice president of that organization.

"In the banking and business world," he said yesterday, "a new order of things obtains. Success in the future will depend upon knowledge of modern methods. The various phases of banking practice in the light of changed conditions will be dicussed at the annual convention. In fact, the program amounts to a short course in banking practice."

The bankers will convene in Springfield on Monday, the 23d. During that day there will be committee meetings, golf and reunions. Three sessions of the convention are provided for—the first two Tuesday morning and afternoon and the third Wednesday morning.

EUROPEAN GRAIN REFARDED OWING TO MARCH COLD

ROME, May 8.—(AP)—The International Institute of Agriculture reports that abnormally low temperatures in March retarded the growth of Europe's winter cereal crops.

Crops suffered most in Hungary and Poland, with minor damage in the Balkan countries. Conditions in western Europe were better. A drought in the first half of April was reported by the most important cereal producing countries of Europe.

Spring sowings, which are expected to cover a larger area than last year, are under way. Tillage, however, has been delayed in most of Europe by prolonged winter conditions.

Silver Futures Advance on National Metal Exchange

New York, May 8.—(AP)—Silver futures on the National Metal Exchange, Inc., closed the week at slight gains and substantially above the low levels of the period. New York spot silver recovered ⅝c an ounce from the week's low level of 27c. Gossip in brokerage circles is that China may be expected to purchase additional silver here and in London to pay for reconstruction in Shanghai.

Movement of Wool Goods Lines Reported Backward

The movement of wool goods lines, both spring and fall, is so extremely backward that numerous New York factors regard a general shutdown of mills this summer as practically inevitable and it is estimated by others that a maximum of 10 per cent of the industry's looms will be operating in the June-August period, according to the Textile World.

INFLATION TALK HITS U. S. MONEY, BASLE IS TOLD

World Bank to Act on German Credit.

[Copyright: 1932: By the New York Times.]

BASLE, May 8.—Reports brought to the Central bank governor's at their meeting here today preliminary to the annual assembly of the bank for international settlement stockholders next week, indicate that banking and commercial institutions in many European countries are now declining to accept dollars.

Because of the light in which Europeans regard the difficulties of the American government in obtaining a balanced budget and the accounts published of the Goldsborough bill and reports of impending inflation, Europeans are hesitating everywhere to accept payment in dollars regardless of the opinions of the soundest financial leaders that fears of inflation in the United States are unfounded.

The World bank in the past week has been receiving numerous queries from bankers and financiers in all countries asking for information concerning the United States situation and the stability of American currency. It is partially due to this feature, the bank being a source of information in international finance, that Leon Fraser, executive vice president, will leave immediately for the United States after the meeting closes Tuesday to study the situation.

Own Situation Bright.

When the bank heads met today their discussions were again dominated by an unexpected event of world importance. President Doumer's assassination therefore affected the deliberations, as the Hitler victory and Kreuger scandal intruded at previous gatherings this year. In the main world events rather than the bank's own affairs monopolized attention, and this time the bank situation seemed the brightest point on the horizon.

President Gates W. McGarrah's report, which will be approved by the board tomorrow and submitted to stockholders Tuesday, shows that the world bank though deprived of its principal trust, the handling of German reparations, made more money this year than last. A substantial dividend will be divided and the bank's shareholders will be reassured that even should the Lausanne conference, as anticipated, prolong the Hoover moratorium for one or two or three years, the institution can continue profitably to function. The bank will be able to continue to operate successfully because Germany's large fund of 62,000,000 reichsmarks, provided by The Hague treaty, remains in the bank's coffers permanently and can be utilized without cost to the bank.

Wants Easier Terms.

Germany, however, may be expected eventually to attempt to regain control of this fund if the moratorium is prolonged. Meanwhile it is demanding easier terms for its $90,000,000 credit which comes up for renewal on June 4. The board tomorrow probably will vote to renew its share without change in condition, agreeing to accept whatever terms Germany obtains from the Bank of England, the Federal Reserve Bank of France, co-creditors with the World bank. The interest rate on this credit was reduced to 6 per cent at the April meeting of the board.

Twenty governors of European central banks will attend the stockholders meeting Tuesday with President McGarrah, the accredited representative of the United States shareholders. After the morning meeting the bank has arranged interesting talks from notable financial experts on monetary topics. The fact that Prof. Charles Rist, vice president of the Bank of France, who was among those scheduled for today, notified the board that he was detained in Rumania where he is advising on delicate financial matters, gives the only indication of ominous reports received by the bank concerning the Danubian central European situation.

MEXICO SEEKS TO IMPROVE INNS, DRAW TOURISTS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

MEXICO CITY, May 8.—The government organ "Diario Official" will publish tomorrow a presidential decree removing the import duties from all material, except furniture, to be used for the construction, furnishing, decoration or sanitation of hotels to be constructed or remodeled. The decree is effective next Monday and applies not only to hotels in this city, but in all parts of the republic.

Furniture was excepted from the provisions of the decree because excellent factories are in operation in Mexico. The decree is intended to encourage the building of modern hotels both here and along state and national highways for tourists and commercial travelers. President Ortiz Rubio would like to see modern hotels in hundreds of picturesque Mexican towns and villages.

The decree is seen as an invitation to hotel builders north of the Rio Grande to turn their attention to Mexico. Further, it is evidence of the government's intention to build up tourist trade.

LESS BORROWING BY STATES, CITIES IN LAST MONTH

New York, May 8.—New state and municipal bond authorizations by the taxpayers of 24 communities reported during April totaled $9,007,000, according to The Daily Bond Buyer of New York. This is almost as much as the total of all authorizations for the first three months of the year and compares with $3,262,600 during March of this year. Totals for April in previous years were $17,587,594 in 1931, $45,525,479 in 1930, and $37,963,300 in 1929.

A few of the larger authorizations last month were $1,400,000, Wright county, Ia.; $5,000,000, Pittsburgh, Pa., and $400,000 Ochiltree county, Tex.

Proposals to issue $2,662,600 in new bonds were defeated by the voters of 28 municipalities last month. Totals for April in previous years were $14,172,050 in 1931, $13,535,500 in 1930 and $70,790,370 in 1929.

BOARD TO WATCH CONGRESS VOTES ON ECONOMY

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, May 8.—The New York Produce exchange has sent a letter to its members in twenty-three states, telling them that it is arranging to report at frequent intervals the recorded votes of their senators and representatives on every measure touching economy and a balanced budget.

The board of managers of the exchange expressed the opinion that the national budget must be balanced immediately and that this should be effected to the greatest degree possible out of savings. Unless this was accomplished, it said, recovery from the depression would be postponed indefinitely, with the probability meanwhile of worse times to come.

April Chain Store Sales Reported in Sharp Drop

Sales for April of chain stores reporting so far show general and fairly sharp decreases from the same month last year. According to interests who closely follow sales trends of the chains, the April decline was accentuated by the fact that last year's sales included the Easter business.

World Use of American Cotton Grows in March

World consumption of American cotton in March was larger than in any other month since January, 1930, according to the New York Cotton exchange service. It aggregated 1,157,000 bales, compared with 1,066,000 in February and 979,000 in March a year ago.

KREUGER COMMITTEE MOVES TO EXAMINE SWEDISH COLLATERAL

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, May 8.—The protective committee headed by Grayson M. P. Murphy representing the holders of Kreuger and Toll company 5 per cent secured debentures, due 1959, has notified debenture holders that the committee has, in collaboration with the American trustee, taken steps to verify the presence in Sweden of so much of the collateral securing the debentures as was not held in this country or in England.

"The securities held in Sweden as collateral have been found to conform with the records of the American trustee, the securities appear to be genuine, and we are advised by Swedish counsel that they are so held as to be free from any levy or attachment which might be asserted against them prior to the charge created by the indenture in favor of the secured debentures," the letter says.

"One of the major problems which confronts the debenture holders is that of establishing, for what it may be worth, a claim as general creditors against any free assets which may be found, while retaining an adequate opportunity to realize the large potential value which may ultimately be found to inhere in the approximately $59,000,000, or equivalent in foreign currency, face amount of miscellaneous foreign bonds which appear to constitute the collateral for $47,596,500 principal amount of debentures."

HOLDS CONSUMER MUST GET CREDIT TO BUSINESS AID

Credit for the consumer is more necessary than an expanded line for the producer, as a means of maintaining business stability, according to C. C. Hanch, general manager of the National Association of Finance companies, who stated yesterday that the Glass-Steagall law to liberalize the rediscout provisions of the federal reserve act was designed to care temporarily for tottering banks and not to make it possible for the ultimate consumer to purchase normally.

"People who have no money cannot buy and prosperity will not be general until credit is extended to these people who largely make up the buying power of the nation," Mr. Hanch said.

"Liberalizing credit to the manufacturer will not meet the situation as factories cannot afford to turn out goods unless there is somebody to buy them. The way to resumption of employment is to resume consumption.

"Paper of the finance companies, the specialized commercial banks which provide consumer credit, is not eligible for rediscount under the Glass-Steagall law except by an involved and cumbersome process. The notes given by the finance companies to banks are admittedly among the safest securities which they hold. The leading bankers of the country support the statement that finance companies pay promptly; nevertheless, they must pay an excessively high rate of interest because their paper is not subject to rediscount, which high rate must be passed on to consumers."

Major Nonferrous Metal Trade Held at Low Level

Trading in the major nonferrous metals held at a rather low level during the week just closed, according to Metal and Mineral Markets. Except for a spectacular advance in tin, inspired by an even more drastic production curtailment program than previously announced, the trend of prices was mostly downward.

A Plan That Failed Explained by Directors to Stockholders

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, May 8.—Why, in 1929, they recommended the sale of stock of the Electric Bond and Share company to officers and employés and, in 1931, advised cancellation of the plan, is told in detail in a memorandum mailed today to stockholders of the company by the six directors who were responsible for the moves.

In a pamphlet entitled "Why a Sound Plan Failed and Was Repealed" the directors give a chronology of events leading up to the adoption and the cancellation of the stock sales plan, which aroused severe criticism from stockholders at meetings on Dec. 7, 1931, and March 22, 1932.

The report is signed by E. K. Hall, George H. Howard, Edwin G. Merrill, William C. Potter, Lewis E. Pierson, and Frederick Strauss. The three other directors, S. Z. Mitchell, Frederick A. Farrar, and C. E. Groesbeck, who are also officers of the company and were participants under the plan, did not take part in the deliberations regarding the plan and are not signatories of the memorandum. The expense of publication and distribution of the report has been defrayed by the six directors.

Has Two Assets.

The statement says the Electric Bond and Share company has two principal assets: securities, representing an interest in properties, and men. The latter, it outlines, 43 experts whose experience covers every phase of the operation of power and light, gas and other utility properties.

"How to keep this team of men intact and to insure their continued service to the company over a period of years was a subject of earnest discussion in the board of directors, particularly in the years 1927-1929, when the public utility industry was expanding rapidly and profitable opportunities for trained men were being opened up in all directions," the report says. "It was believed this desirable result could best be achieved by making it possible for these men to acquire a substantial stock interest in the company under conditions which would insure their best efforts for its success over an average period of their active service, which was more or less arbitrarily estimated at seven and one-half years.

Approved at Meeting.

"Accordingly, on Feb. 21, 1929, a printed notice was mailed to every stockholder calling a stockholders' meeting to act on the merger [of the old Electric Bond and Share company and the Electric Bond and Share Securities company]. This notice contained the recommendation to the stockholders that they set aside 5 per cent of the stock of the new company to be acquired by officers and other employés at a price of $40 a share. The merger and the recommendation were unanimously voted by the stockholders present at the meeting on March 12, 1929.

"A few months previously [October, 1928] stockholders had received the privilege of subscribing to additional shares of the old stock at $90 a share [equivalent to $30 a share for the new stock].

CHICAGO TRADE ERRATIC DURING WEEK OF MAY 7

Business continued irregular in Chicago last week, with automobiles and cotton goods the bright spots in the picture, according to trade observers of the Chicago Association of Commerce. Sales of new motor cars showed a marked upturn from April, with total commitments almost approximating those of the same period a year ago.

Retail buying started well and then tapered off with the inclement weather marking the end of the week. In the wholesale field sales took another upward turn, the number of out of town buyers in the market increasing materially.

Furniture sales continued to attract good followings.

Employment just about held its own, with the pickup in the railroad fields discounted by new reductions among the electrical and retail institutions. Temporary jobs appeared more plentiful as householders began to place their residences and grounds in order for their annual spring sprucing up.

Along these lines, department and hardware stores reported a decided pickup in the sale of garden implements and tools.

While operations in the Chicago steel mills region held to about 20 per cent, there was a more diversified demand for steel products, indicating activity in a greater number of manufacturing lines.

FRENCH PAPERS TELL FAITH IN DOLLAR, BUT CRITICIZE RESERVE

[Copyright: 1932: By the New York Times.]

PARIS, May 8.—Two articles on the dollar, evidently inspired by officials of the treasury and the Bank of France, to which great importance are attached in Paris, appeared in today's Temps and Journal des Debats. Both express faith in the stability of the dollar and are mingled with criticisms of the federal reserve bank's policy as tending toward inflation.

Attention is called to the enormous gold reserves and the fact that American confidence in the dollar cannot be questioned. Moreover, it is pointed out that confidence will not be shaken even though $1,000,000,000 in gold has to be exported. Therefore, there is no external danger, according to the French, but opinion here does not approve of the federal reserves credit expansion policy.

The purchase of treasury bonds by the reserve is considered here as a form of inflation and it is felt that passage by the house of the Goldsborough bill strengthens the tendency. It is felt that such a policy will be simply the commencement of a policy of directed currency which is not favored by French financiers. However, it is realized that the opposition of President Hoover and Secretary Mills to the bill gives it little chance of acceptance.

Friday Rally Gives Cause for Hope.

BY FRED HARVEY.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, May 8.—Politics continues to dominate the stock market scene. President Hoover's sharp, if belated, rebuke to congress on budget and tax delay was instrumental last Friday in giving the list the first really worthwhile fillip it has had since the middle of February and in setting in train a fresh buzz of talk of "reviving confidence" and hope. Measured by THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE'S averages, the gain on fifty representative stocks of all departments amounted to more than 3½ points on the day. On twenty-five industrials the upturn was even sharper.

But three of the four preceding sessions had brought on quotas of new bear market lows and Saturday's session developed another crop of ungainly minus signs so that the net improvements on the week was slight, amounting to only a point or less. The week-end setback was, of course, to be expected. Traders are not inclined to let such an opportunity for profit taking pass even in a forward clicking market and with conditions what they have been for these last lean months nobody gave a thought to such a risk.

Always a Buyer.

At that, the reversal was not the disheartening affair it might have been. No matter what the situation, there always seems to be two sides to the stock market queston. As weather beaten veterans of the community are fond of reminding themselves, there must be a buyer for every seller, no matter how disconcerting the doings of the immediate moment.

And so it was on Saturday. The readiness with which offerings were absorbed, the support thrown behind the leaders in the pinches, and the lingering evidence of the list's ability to rally when given a break convinced many that the reaction was nothing more serious than a temporary halt of the latest rally rather than a renewal of the long decline. Probably the wish was father to the thought with most. At any rate, the diehards were able to console themselves that "next week will be another week," with a new round of possibilities.

Watching Washington.

Commentators were practically unanimous in the agreement that the course of affairs in political Washington—progress, if any, on the effort to balance the budget, the measures adopted for raising the necessary taxes, the government's response to the nation-wide demand for real economy will largely determine the immediate trend of price movements on the share exchange. Obviously, say the trade reviews, there is no convincing evidence at hand of reviving business. Brokers add that there is little need to look for any until congress finishes its work, shuts up shop, and goes home. In short, the Wall street view is that business just now is waiting on congress and that it must continue to do so.

There are three or four dividend meetings scheduled for the week which ordinarily might be counted upon to exert some influence marketwise. The board of the Atlantic Refining company on Tuesday, for instance, those of New York Central railroad and of the Eastman Kodak on Wednesday and of the Union Pacific on Thursday. The forecasts have not been very rosy about the outlook from any of these sources, however, and those cultivating the constructive viewpoint are not pinning any great hopes on the score.

Oils Improve.

The International Oil conference now at work on foreign trade problems may cut some ice in the petroleum department. The major rôle which the oil industry is playing in the business news of the day is making friends for these stocks now that the group made as good a showing as any on the board during the last week.

The street looks for further announcements of wage reductions from important quarters following the action of the United States Steel board and the disposition is to view this trend as bullish—having in mind the aid it will prove to hardpressed corporations in meeting their charges, until the long hoped for "turn" comes. Just how badly remedial action of some sort is needed is shown by a current compilation disclosing that 405 corporations have reported decreased earnings for the first quarter of the year so far, as against only seventy-three able to show an expansion of net profits over the corresponding period of 1931.

Malayan Rubber Shipment to U. S. Shows Decline

Shipments of crude rubber to the United States from British Malaya, in April, amounted to 21,537 tons, compared with 24,254 tons during March and 29,021 tons in April, 1931, the Rubber Exchange of New York, Inc., reports. Smaller shipments were also recorded to the United Kingdom, continental countries and Japan.

American Smelting and Refining.

Will you kindly let me know if American Smelting 7 per cent preferred would be a sound investment? I have a little money to invest and feel confident in your opinion.—Miss A. P.

American Smelting and Refining company confined operations in its early stages to mining lead and silver. It has since developed its copper and zinc smelting and refining business to such an extent that it is now the largest smelter and refiner of metals in the world.

It still has large investments in copper, lead, zinc, silver and gold mines. Foreign mines are in Mexico, Peru, Australia, Jugoslavia and Newfoundland.

Earnings increased every year, except 1927, from 1921 to 1929. The market for nonferrous metals has slumped greatly since 1929. Prices have declined sharply and demand has contracted.

These factors have not only affected American Smelting's mining operations, but have occasioned large inventory losses, have reduced the amount of available smelting and refining business and have cut down the profit margin of that division.

Net income for 1931 was $875,000, which was only one-fourth of first preferred dividends. Net for 1930 was $11,099,000, which was 3.17 times first preferred dividends, and equal to $3.77 per common share.

Net in 1931 was after $3,195,000 deductions to adjust excess metal inventory prices to market. In 1930 such deductions totaled $2,613,000. Net income for 1929 was $21,832,000, against $18,586,000 for 1928.

On Dec. 31, 1931, current assets were $69,157,000 and current liabilities were $10,980,000. Cash was more than $20,000,000. Working capital was $58,177,000, against $69,909,000 the year before.

Profit and loss surplus was $23,349,000, against $27,541,000 on Dec. 31, 1930, and $44,281,000 at the close of 1929.

Funded debt totals $35,631,000. There are outstanding 500,000 shares of 7 per cent first preferred [par $100], 200,000 shares of 6 per cent second preferred [par $100] and 1,289,940 shares of no par common.

Dividends are being paid on both classes of preferred. Nothing has been paid on the common since the 12½ cent disbursement on Feb. 1, 1932.

The first preferred deserves a fairly good rating. The second preferred is medium grade. We would not class either as a "sound investment" in the sense that high grade bonds are sound. The common is a speculation.

DETROIT AUTO ORDERS HELP STEEL MARKET

il Orders Also Offer Better Sign.

Automotive requirements being filled in the Detroit district are a sustaining force for steelmaking operations and enabled the industry in the week ended May 7 to hold the 24 per cent rate attained the week preceding, states the magazine Steel.

Tentative schedules for this week indicate little change. For the first time in weeks eastern Pennsylvania mills are expanding, and more capacity is being put on at Chicago and Youngstown, promising an offset for reductions at Birmingham and Buffalo and a stationary position at Cleveland.

Auto Business Helps.

With Ford and Chevrolet each scheduling about 60,000 units this month—40,000 of the Fords being the new eight—and Plymouth about 20,000, motor car production in May will be the highest in at least eight months. Especially for Detroit district mills is this providing tonnage, and operations there are in excess of 60 per cent.

To a somewhat lesser degree northern Ohio mills expect to benefit from this automotive activity. Chicago mills have been accumulating orders, for economical rolling, and last week's sales were the third best this year. Pittsburgh, however, appears resigned to a continuation of dull conditions, and both bookings and sentiment there are low.

Great Northern railroad has placed 10,000 tons of rails and 2,000 tons of track fastenings with the Illinois, Inland, and Bethlehem companies. Postponement of the 7,000 tons for the Alton railroad is probable. Freight car builders in the Chicago district expect noteworthy repair business this fall. In April not one standard freight car was ordered, the first blank month in history.

Frisco Bridge a Factor.

A preliminary estimate of structural steel requirements of the San Francisco-Oakland bridge is 150,000 tons; this is exclusive of cable. Bids are being taken on 3,500 tons of plates and structurals for bulkhead gates for the Hoover dam. Active structural inquiry this week totals 275,000 tons; awards, aggregating 11,551 tons, are below the weekly average this year.

Barge work, totaling 20,000 tons, is nearer the award stage at Pittsburgh. Missouri Power and Light company, Kansas City, Mo., is projecting a 15-mile 18-inch steel gas line. Tin plate specifications at Pittsburgh have eased, dropping production to 45 per cent, but in the valley the 50 per cent gait still is maintained.

Raw Materials Inactive.

Semi-finished and raw materials continue inactive, save for pig iron moving to automotive foundries. Foreign iron is a depressing factor on prices in the east, resulting in the filing of a dumping complaint at Washington. Dumping of steel hoops also has been complained of.

Despite some concessions at Detroit, finished steel prices are regarded as firmly held. Producers will resist strongly any effort to exact lower prices as the result of further wage and salary reductions. State and municipal economy is retarding some business, and in the Pacific northwest successful bidders must take bonds in payments.

Asserts Phone Position Strong Over Long Period

The telephone industry remains in a strong position from a long term point of view, but during the next few months the industry is likely to experience a continuation of the downward trend of revenues established during the first quarter of 1932, says the Standard Statistics company. Telegraph companies have been more seriously affected and recovery for this branch is likely to be slower, according to the survey.

Report Shows More Bank Business in This District

Debits to individual deposit account reported to the Federal Reserve bank of Chicago for the week ended May 4, 1932, by 162 banks in thirty-six leading clearing house cities in the Seventh federal reserve district aggregate $916,253,000, an increase of 27.7 per cent compared with a week ago ($717,654,000). Compared with the corresponding week of last year ($1,445,183,000) a decrease of 36.6 per cent was shown.

Elect St. Louisan Official of Mississippi Barge Line

St. Louis, Mo., May 8.—(AP)—Election of C. F. Jefferies as vice president of the Mississippi Valley Barge Line company was announced today by L. Wade Childress, president of the company. Jefferies is director of operations for the barge line, with headquarters at Cincinnati.

I. C. Cuts Rates to Laredo for Mexicans Out of Work

The Illinois Central railroad has put in a reduced rate from Chicago to Laredo, Texas for Mexican workers who are unable to find employment and cope with living conditions abroad. This rate applies via St. Louis, Memphis or New Orleans effective immediately.

RAILROAD NOTES

Rehiring of maintenance of way forces by the principal rail lines, which had been deferred this spring somewhat longer than usual, is now definitely proceeding, a survey has disclosed. The Milwaukee road reports one of the largest reëmployment gains, having added more than 1,600 to its track gangs recently. The largest gangs are at work in the La Crosse and Montana divisions. The Chicago and North Western has hired more than 900 track laborers since May 1 over its entire system.

Alton railroad, the first carrier to report for April, shows a deficit of $212,038 after charges, against a net income of $8,597 in March. However, the line continues to show better results than in 1931, when April loss was $226,293.

Commonwealth Customers—PAY LESS—for LOANS

$2.93 is the average Monthly Cost of a $228 loan under COMMONWEALTH'S Reduced Rate. This allows 25 months for repayment. There is no lower cost than this in Chicago

COMMONWEALTH'S rate on amounts above $100 is substantially lower than the lawful rate usually charged.

THE personal property which nearly every family owns and the signature of husband and wife enable one to secure any amount up to $300 quickly and easily.

NO FEES. You get full amount of the loan and up to 25 months to repay. Interest at the Reduced Rate is charged only while you keep the money.

Also Salary and Auto Loans.
